BUILT to LAST

As we move away from the safety of the eighth grade and toward the opportunity and independence of college life, we lean upon the framework created through our experiences. Our high school classes, clubs, sports and friends have set the foundation from which we continue to grow.

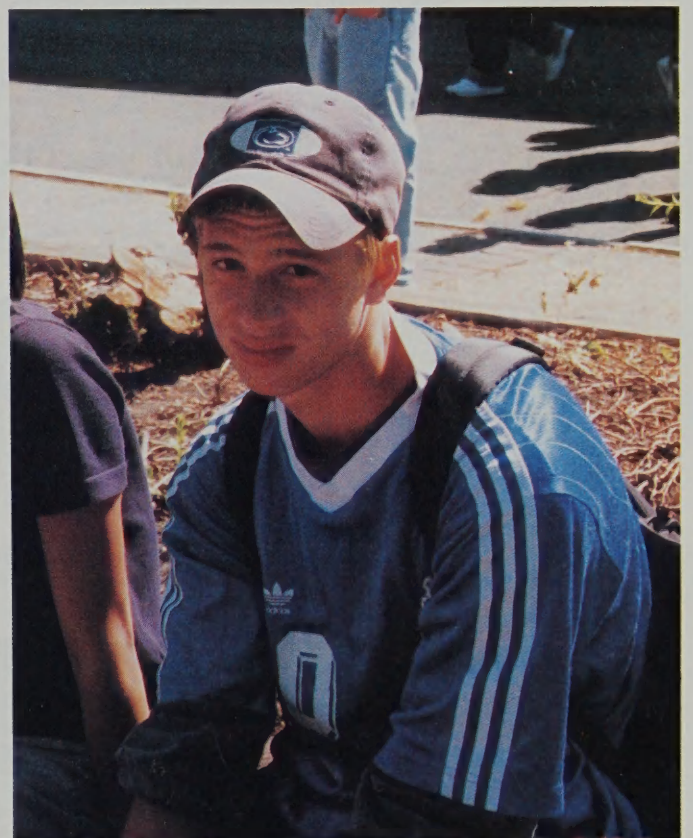

From the opening word on our ninth grade research papers to the final word on our college essays, we learn to defend our points of view, choice of friends, interests, and plans for the future. These precious four years at Lexington High School are those which define us.

We are the students of LHS;
we are built to last.

And the batteries for Leah Bernstein just keep on going and going and going and going and going and going and going...

"Sigh... Gossips... where would we be without them...?"

-Lisette Silva, Rachel Backner, Lily Berezin

Unable to hide his joy to be in school, Aaron McCloskey displays his "Wha-cha-lookin'-at" look.

Creating the Atmosphere

Nothing is complete without its own unique style. While activities, clubs, and sports are essential nuts and bolts of what make us, having fun while we work is what makes the whole project worthwhile. The friendships we form, romances we endure, and good times we have will forever determine the person we become. Whether we like to go to Burger King during lunch, play football after school, or even just stay in the quad and swat bees, we create the atmosphere in our time together.

"Yoo hoo!!!" says senior Jason Hirschhorn, trying to seduce the ignorant freshmen girls into doing his homework for him.

"Let's see... I've heard that if you don't look at the photographer, you have more of a chance to have your picture taken... I wonder if that's true... OH! Picture guy... let me pose without letting him know..."
-Deena Mencow

Jonah Mitropoulous and Bret Leighton: Male bonding... however you want to define it...

"Where did we go wrong?"

-Dr. Shohet, referring to seniors John Lin and Hallie Gnatovich.

Senior Jeremy Singh is obviously cuckoo for cocoa puffs whenever he walks through the main quad.

Wackos

Everybody has a little bit of craziness inside him/herself, but it is the truly spectacularly insane ones that we politely refer to as, for the lack of a better word, wackos. Yeah, you've seen them around. Some of them are your friends. They seem to be completely devoid of a brain because, simply put, everything they do is stupid, immature, and makes you want to scream. They run around the field house track gyrating their shirts in the air; they slap you and spit on you and think it's funny; and some of them do great blowfish imitations. Their faces contort in so many gross and inexplicable ways that it is hard for one to classify this as human behavior.

Many of them, however, can be a big nuisance if they attack you unexpectedly. For example, you are anxiously expecting one of Dr. Shohet's unnecessarily-difficult quizzes for next block and you are studying in the main quad thumbing through your notes. All of a sudden you hear a loud belch and this vociferous companion sits next to you. He asks you what you're doing and if he can help or get you a bagel. You politely reply, "No thanks, I'm studying," but the harassment continues. He slaps you randomly on the butt, plays with your cheeks (facial ones, stupid), and gives you painful massages as he chants your name in that same annoying voice. You're already foaming at the mouth in anger, but your bumbling idiot of a friend snatches your notebook away and runs down to D house in record time. Somehow this kind of people have endless resources of energy and are simply too fast to catch. Hopelessly, you chase him around for five more minutes before the first bell rings and it's time to take that quiz... You pin the perpetrator to the wall and demand your book. He whimpers out an "OK," hands it to you, and runs off devilishly to find another hapless victim. It's a never-ending cycle...

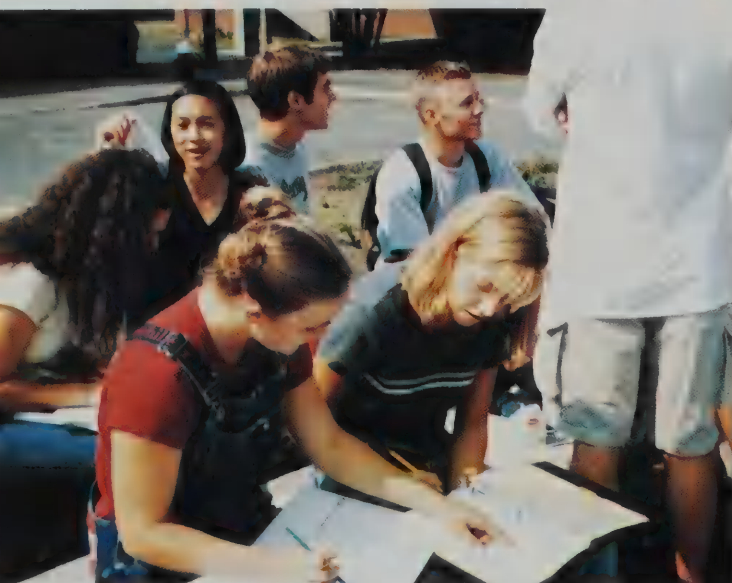

Wackos in school are annoying, for sure, but outside of it is when they are most valuable. They are first to volunteer to commit some inane act of puerile stupidity. It comes naturally to them. They think of this stuff all the time. They'll make you laugh every second you are around them (unless they're going after you), which is such an invaluable gift. Sometimes you wonder what will happen to these people once they leave high school. Will they continue to wield such power of immaturity, or will they finally "learn" to become "normal" people? Maybe you fear for them because, in the adult world, nobody gets away with any of this very easily. But then you look at LHS faculty and are rest assured that there is indeed a nice, comfortable home, for these talented and beautiful people.

Sigh... another fallen victim of the poisonous school lunch: Keith Wilton.

"AHHHHHHH!!!" screams senior Avital Levy right after realizing that she had unconsciously swallowed a piece of cafeteria food.

Distracted by the sight of a colossal freshman-backpack, senior Mike O'Connor decides to point and laugh instead of study.

After realizing that she didn't do her homework, senior Kristin Hopwood decides to write down whatever Jill Sweatt has...

After realizing that his teacher isn't asleep, Pablo De La Huerta decides it's time for him to get some work done.

Makin' Love TO THE TEXTBOOK

Textbooks get more action than anyone here at LHS. Yes, even YOU. What is so alluring about a textbook? Oh sure, you complain, complain, complain about having to carry their textbooks. When not slung over your back in a big sack, the most popular textbook-toting position is in front of the torso, with crossed arms encircling it. Sounds like a hug. I don't know about you, but I don't hug things I hate.

At the beginning of the year, everyone always wants "the pretty textbook," then they walk around hugging it and spend endless hours of quality time curled up with it in their rooms, or in a secluded corner of the school. People concentrate on their textbooks, they try to understand them. Many a date has been broken because someone found a textbook just too darn enticing; now you know what "sorry, I have to study" really means. I don't know about you, but it sounds to me like being a textbook ain't that bad.

What makes textbooks a better alternative to dating is that there's always enough of them to go around. Please, girls, are there ever enough Matt Damons or Leonardo DiCaprios to go around? No you guys. You might think you've got it made in the shade, but not only are textbooks more accessible, they're less conceited and more loyal too. Especially the Honors Biology book. Oh baby...once you've experienced the Ben Affleck of textbooks, a.k.a. the Honors Biology book...there's no going back...

So that leaves just one question to answer: what's up with the freshmen backpack? The answer is as simple as this: most freshmen do not date. Or at least not for longer than two weeks. What better way to fill the attention void left by having no one to spend your time with than by counting on the endless hours of attention and compassion proffered by your trusted old companion, Mr. Calculus and Analytic Geometry? Why do some of us never relinquish our underclass tendency to tug an anvil's worth of books around on our back all day? Aren't we afraid of scoliosis or some other spinal condition? It's just that we know the secret to fulfillment: textbooks, two at a time.

After spending the entire previous night laboriously cutting his hair, Chris Nasson catches up on some homework before class.

MEN vs Women

Women's quote of the day:

"Men are like a fine wine. They all start out like grapes, and it's our job to stomp on them and keep them in the dark until they mature into something with which you'd like to have dinner."

Men's quote of the day:

"Women are like fine wine. They all start out fresh, fruity and intoxicating to the mind and then turn full-bodied with age until they go all sour and vinegary and give you a headache."

Men are pigs...

It's Friday and the bell rings signaling the end of school and a start of another glorious weekend. You're walking from F house to your car. You're working that "don't wanna be a playa no mo'" strut that took you your whole high school career to perfect. Yes, you think you're pretty damn cool. You see a couple of friends outside and you jerk your head upwards in that uniform "wazzup?" greeting. They return your acknowledgement with similar head spasms. You've traversed through the main quad and move towards G house hallway. Yanking up your eight-sizes-too-big pants, you step through the front doors. A fly girl catches your eye. She turns her head towards you pretending not to notice that you've noticed her. You continue to blatantly stare hoping that she might look back at you once more. She does. Damn, you're smooth. Continuing through the hallway, you scope out the scenery. Not much going on in here. You step into the parking lot, twirling your car keys around your finger, just to reestablish to all those mere mortals that you have your own car. You pile into the car, blast the rap, pump up the bass, and peel out of the parking lot almost running over three freshman in the process. Only four more hours till night action begins.

...It's 7:00 and you and your posse are heading out for the night looking for some excitement. You hear about a party in a neighboring town but you don't know exactly where it is. You hit the highway in the general direction. Hey, if Christopher Columbus didn't need directions, neither do you. Two hours later you find the party...in Waltham...no, you weren't lost, you were simply taking the long, scenic route. You get home after a night of excitement. It's 12:30 and your answering machine is flashing. You push the play button and you're greeted with the melodious sound of your ever-sweet girlfriend:

"Um...where were you? You were supposed to come pick me up thirty minutes ago. Did you forget our six month anniversary dinner? Well, I guess you can spend the rest of your weekend all by yourself cuz DAMN, I ain't your girl no mo'."

-By "Hard to get"

Frustrated by the lack of men suitable to her taste, Jasmeen Spidde displays her anger with her trademark: the ice-cold stare.

"Oh sure...blame it all on me... It's not my fault that I get all the good-looking guys..."

-Kamran Demirjian

"Excuse me! Are you looking at me? Do you actually think that you can get a piece of me? DUH! Let me tell you something: ALL MEN STINK!!! So just get away from me you crazy boys!!!"

-Adriana Schick

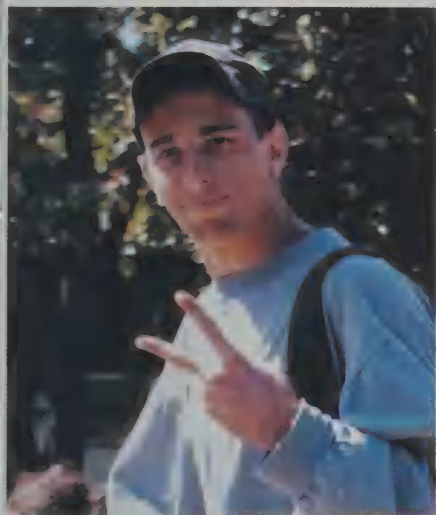

"FRIEDY! If you give me anymore CRAP, I'm going to make your life a LIVING HELL!!!"

-Ann Gokhale

"Hmmm... interesting... now there's something you don't see everyday."
 -Brendan McDonald, while looking at a fine specimen of the opposite gender.

"Oh yeah... she wants me... bad... not just because I've got real fine legs, but because I am F-I-N-E FINE!!!"
 -John Lin

"This? Nah... that's not the number of girls that I'm macking right now... that's the number of girls that I'm NOT macking."
 -Bobby Herman

Women are definitely the leading causes of headaches, embarrassment, frustration, and sometimes they border on being downright evil. Oh sure, they might look docile enough on the surface. You take them home to meet the parental unit, and they're all smiles and pleasant, but then you get in the car to see something like... "Ever After" (a chick flick...right?) and it's basically over. You have now entered a world of manipulation; being told "you just don't get it," and you are able to experience, vicariously, more problems than you ever thought possible in one lifetime let alone in the time before you picked her up.

Women are strange. Their moods seem to change more quickly than it takes Mr. O'Reilly to relate one of his stories to a "Physics Man" problem; their moods swing faster than it takes Mr. Grant to describe some aspect of Chemistry using the word "crap." You'll be walking through the quad with the woman of your choice, saying all the right things, making all the right jokes. Yep, you're saying to yourself, "She wants me." Then, perhaps by divine intervention from Mme. Girondel, you bend down to pick up a piece of trash. Oh no.

"Oh, so you're saying you think I'm a piece of garbage? Huh? You'd rather pick up trash that talk to me? You're not even listening to me! Well, you can play trash collector all by yourself this Saturday night!"

Hmmm...

Take notice. These women are not what they seem. You could be sitting in History, admiring girl X, let's call her, Tyra Banks. For the entire week she's looking good. The weekend comes. You see her in downtown Lexington in sweat pants, a tee shirt with a beef-jerky stain on it, no make-up and a full grown beard! On Monday you can't look at the girl the same way so YOU HAVE TO PAY ATTENTION IN CLASS FOR THE REST OF THE YEAR!

After ignoring the chicks, you let them take care of themselves... Girls fight with each other about the most trivial issues, and always pick the wrong guys (a.k.a. 'not me'). We can never get enough of them, though. So in the collective words of known 'macks' and love doctors alike: "Mack long and prosper"

-By Desperato

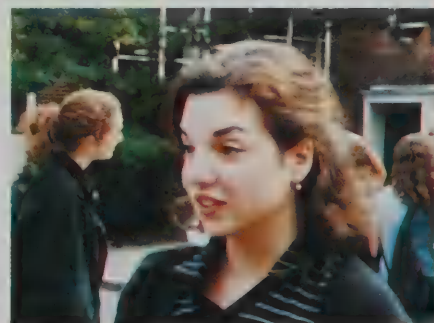

Senior John Erickson displays his first-time side flip, gets the women every time.

"OH MY GOD!!!" says the overly enthused Amy Gillis, "you have a car, and you can drive me to McDonalds!!!"

A Typical Day

You are jolted awake by your bedside alarm while the rest of the world is still nestled in their beds. The sky is dark; the air is cold; the bed is warm; but you must wipe that drool off your face and stumble into the shower, for you are a Lexington High School Student. You arrive at school fashionably late, after gargling down a bowl of Cheerios and studying for your English test while you drive to school. You make your way to the student parking lot, only to find that the only available parking spots are in the "ghetto." You carefully step out of your car to the sweet harmony of Wu-Tang. Unfortunately, you arrive at the wrong class due to the illogical nature of the schedule. After making it through the first block, you decide it would be a good time to practice for your upcoming cross country race. You break out in a full sprint from your previous class, in A house, to your next one, in J house. Despite just setting your personal best in the two mile, you arrive two minutes late to Calculus. Luckily, Mr. Rahman forgives you. After shedding layer and layer of clothing, as the temperature in the room approaches ninety, you are finally granted relief in the form of the bell. Ah, lunch. You leave campus for real food only to find, upon arrival at McDonalds, that they have not yet started serving lunch. You glance at your watch. 10:30. Damn schedule. You return to school, dejected, but optimistic, thinking that perhaps Physics will be cancelled. No such luck. After "going to the bathroom" for the entire period, the last five minutes of class seem like hours. On the way out Mr. O'Reilly hands you worksheet ZXY 5, but warns you that most of the answers he has pencilled in the margin are probably wrong. Ah...Freeblock. You contemplate your options: go home and watch Jerry Springer's "Too Hot for TV #89," or make the pilgrimage to Dunkin' Donuts and buy an iced coffee and donut. You opt for the later. Returning from freeblock, you arrive at Dr. Shohet's Modern Lit. class ready for action. You arrive with no books, but the iced coffee. Dr. Shohet pops a quiz asking something about how such and such a book relates to the meaning of life, yada, yada, yada. You stare blankly at the paper and consider writing the answers to yesterday's French quiz. Dr. Shohet, in true form, has you grade your own work. But because you have no pen at all, you attempt to use your iced coffee straw as your "second implement." Finally, class is over. Your final class of the day is freeblock, but because of sports, going home would be pointless. You trudge up to the library, only to find Librarian "Regulator" Westfall "ssshing" people and then booting them from the library. Suddenly you hear someone moan/yell "ahhhhhh" out the library window and observe as Nick Roetter is escorted out of the library for the third time this week. You go to practice after school and then home where your mom mentions homework, a word you once knew, but is now only an oxymoron. You go to sleep thinking of what tomorrow will bring at that zany place they call LHS.

Junior Luke O'Reilly is hounded by yet another one of his many suitors in the main quad.

Unable to find any female companions, Senior Max Wulff and Ben Adams comfort each other as best as they can... in their own friendly way...

Smooth Operators

All the ladies know who I am. Every day, they anxiously await my arrival at school. Meanwhile, I'm just rolling out of bed. No need to fix my hair; it's naturally perfect. As I pass by the mirror in the front hall, I wink. This is the same wink the drives the women wild. It may look natural, but let me tell you something: it takes a lot of work to be this smooth.

Backing out of the driveway in my silver BMW, I almost hit my mailbox. I must have been staring at my reflection in the rearview mirror again. Damn, I'm hot. I pull into the student parking lot and cruise up and down the row so that all my admirers can catch a glimpse of me before I head over to my reserve space in the ghetto. I don't have a parking sticker, but when you are as smooth as I am, you don't need one.

Even in school, the ladies can't get enough of me. They love the way I toss my windblown hair out of my eyes, the way I tuck a single notebook under my muscular arm, and how I nod ever so slightly when I pass them by. I have perfected my technique to the point where I can keep my women interested without appearing attached.

At my soccer game, ladies crowd the sideline for a chance to see me in action. I can hear my name floating on the breeze, mingled with the screams of ecstasy emitted as my admirers gaze at my rippling thighs. As further titillation, I remove my shirt at the end of the game. It's the least I can do for those who love me. Damn, I'm hot.

As I enter the locker room after the game, carrying all the gifts I have received, I laugh at the other guys. Only in their wildest dreams could they ever be as smooth as I am. Hearing the screams outside the locker room door, I hurry to get dressed. As I emerge, I see the familiar look of awe on the faces of all the girls. I know what they're thinking: "Damn, he's hot!" I am temporarily blinded by the glare of the flash bulbs going off, but once my eyes clear I catch a glimpse of my reflection in a window. That's when I realize... I'm not wearing any pants. Oh well, it doesn't matter. Damn, I'm hot.

"So who's laughing now?" says senior Nick "Da Pinp" Zimmerman to the many suitors of Amanda Lee.

Junior rebel Shaw Flick, with the aid of Matt "E.T." Burrows, successfully skips one of his classes without getting caught.

Everyone laughs as Bryan Marcovici confesses that he has just wet his pants as fellow senior Milan Raj sympathizes in silence.

Hypnotized by an ancient Greek spirit, senior Chuck Howe "rests his eyes" during mythology.

"Oh yay! More food for me!" says Casey Cross, unaware that she's become yet another victim of yearbook's public humiliation.

Busted!!!

aka Caught in the Act

So, you thought no one was looking, eh, tricky? Perhaps you'd be surprised to learn that we, at headquarters, know the full details of that pencil dropping maneuver you pulled during Gigi's subjunctive quiz on October 7th, 1998 at 9:13 AM. The frequent, yet artful under-the-desk gum disposal in biology, the Outing Club poster you vandalized while seemingly alone in the S-House stairwell (with the lights off), and even the note to Gertrude that you hastily scrawled on the wall of a bathroom stall, have not gone undetected by our agents. We, the eyes and ears of LHS, are everywhere. In vintage Heidbrinkian newspeak, "Big Brother is Watching You."

Whatever, Mayor of Loserville! That was way back in 1984, when the freshmen were born!!! Besides, everyone knows LHS is a LIBERAL school!! We have a student senate to counteract the evils of totalitarianism... so "Big Lanoue" would have you believe. And just how many bills has this so-called senate passed? Exactly. Pumped through the 4-chambered heart of LHS is the blood of Orwellian subterfuge. Admit it, you've wondered why Mr. Kollen is so engrossed in X-Files. Why're Mr. Yelland's pages mysteriously graced by those two elusive birds, and how can that man be capable of predicting weather more accurately than Peter Jennings? Those rotating Vita-Pup machines are really highly receptive satellite dishes. By the way, if you dare to ingest the "bubble gum" flavored slushy, you could end up with symptoms similar to those experienced by Vietnamese Agent Orange victims. As you might gather from the revealing photos on this page alone, certain students have obviously, and unfortunately, fallen prey to these brain damaging effects already. Curious about all those broken clocks? Spy cameras. Proposed "renovations" will ensure that every classroom is equipped with one at every desk, capturing the move of every student. You want proof? Just take a flip through this yearbook, gumshoe. The photographers work for us. When you nod off in physics, when you wear another ridiculous volleyball ensemble, when you flirt with Dr. Fiveash, we are there. Sleep well, freshmen!

-By Mr. X

OK, Abby Krich, I know you wanna recycle the world, but let that one go...

WOW...look at that...each one of them only has one leg.

BEYOND THE Norm

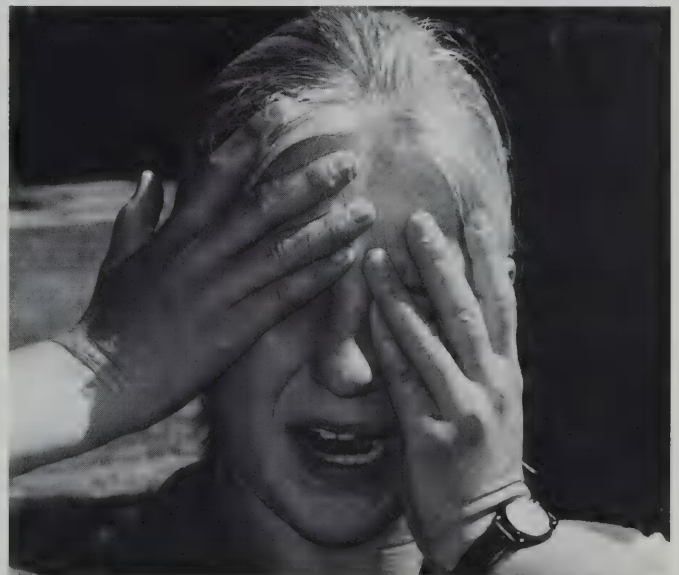

What's norm? ...Are you crazy? Do you mean to tell me you're a student here and you know not of the norm and the precedents it sets? I say that's a fate worse than death. There's only one explanation for ignorance on this topic... The people on top...a.k.a. seniors... are so busy raising the norm that you just can't keep up. But don't give up though; because that's something normal people do, and we just can't accept that kind of behavior here at LHS. We go above and beyond the call of duty until duty loses its voice. Think about it. Every morning for announcements(especially when it's Ari's turn), it takes at least a day for him to finish. After he congratulates all the scholars for being scholarly and then all the athletes for being athletic and then all the singers for knowing how to sing, it's like we have to thank him when he's done for... well, being him. It's ridiculous; the magnitude of talents held within these walls. No wonder they need to expand on a structure so obviously built to last. Year after year students set standards that impress the most hardened cynical souls on academic standards. The average eye would have no idea what goes on behind the scenes. If there weren't newspapers for us to flaunt our obvious greatness our success would still reach the masses. These walls are bursting with intelligence that could cure the common canker sore and talent that requires at least a week of no homework. If you really think about it, that's why we frequent places like Dunkin' Donuts so much. We need to refuel for the next daunting task. We have to keep gritting our teeth and flailing our hands in the air just to kick perseverance in the pants and stand on his chest as though we have conquered Mt. Everest. We, the students of this domain that gets us ready for the world, are ready for anything because that's what it takes to go beyond the norm.

"Tada!" Says Jim Doran as he tries to show off some of his slick new dance moves.

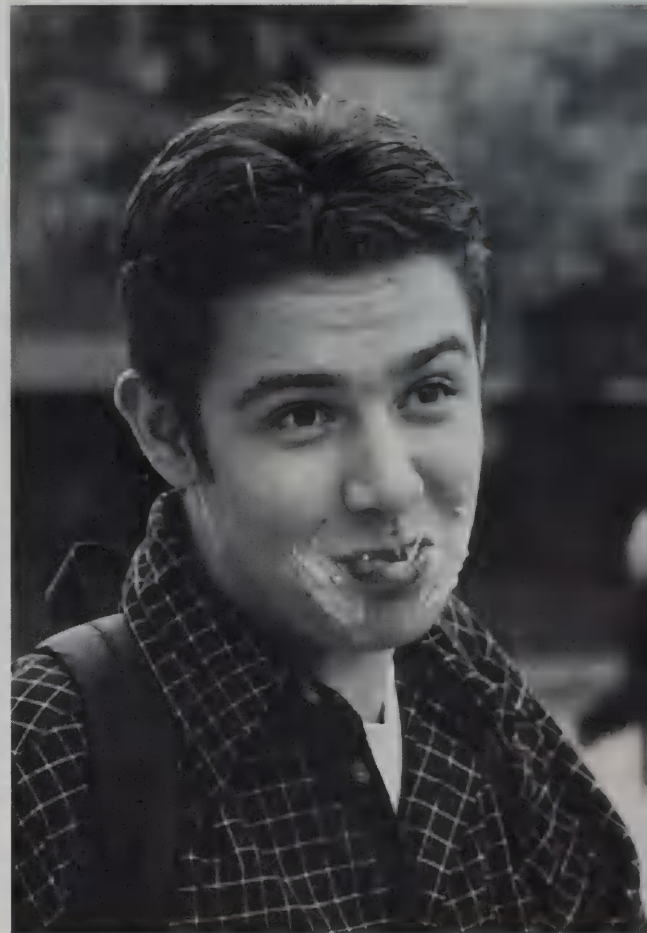

Mike McGirr and Chris Nasson: Can we say... harassment?

Suzanne Kern's not weird... she's just rubbing her eyes with her own style.

Now... I don't care what you say or think about bikers...but dat takes some major skeetz.

"OH NO! Not another one!" Exclaims Robin Handwerker, as she tries to feel the baby kick from Mary Taylor's pillow.

"Accept the fact that some days you're the pigeon, and some days you're the statue..." I guess in this case, Jason Massello's the statue.

"GOT BEEF?" -Will Jaffee

Obviously, Dylan McDuffee's having one of those days.

Murphy's Law

The following is a true story. Any resemblances to people you know or events that have taken place are not made up. The message for you: be afraid. Be very afraid of the no-good-very-bad-day-at-LHS. It's enough to break some poor souls.

You wake up at 7:41 to the sound of rain hitting your window pane. You sink your head deeper into that fluffy pillow and pull the warm blanket under your chin. Saturday mornings are great. But wait, something's wrong. Saturday was two days ago which makes this Monday morning. As you fly out of bed you frantically skip your shower even though you had hockey practice the night before. You pull some clothes off of your floor because you were too busy to do your laundry this weekend. You run downstairs, grab your bag, and sprint to school. On the way to class you try to smooth out your soon to be dreads and try to find a stick of gum, no such luck. As you approach your A block class, soaked and cold, a feeling of despair permeates your being. You have made it to school in record time, but your watch is reading 8:02, a death sentence with this teacher. You bravely enter the room, everything goes silent, all eyes are on you. The teacher gives you a huge spiel about respect and working in a gas station when you're 40 if you don't pull off a B. You don't quite follow, but you nod your sleep-deprived head so that maybe he will leave you alone. It's painful, but somehow you manage to make it to the bell. As you walk to your next class in J House a daze falls upon you. The aftermath of the adrenaline rush is taking its toll. You ask to go to the bathroom, thinking some cold water might help. You hobble down the hall, whirls of sound and color floating around past you. You step into the bathroom, look up, and see people of the opposite sex looking at you funny. Mortified, you run across the hall, cursing the people who switched the location of the bathrooms upstairs and downstairs.

As your day goes on, nothing goes right. You had a big paper due in English, you forgot to put it into your bag this morning as you ran out. In gym you didn't have any sneakers because the "friend" you lent them to last week never returned them. Lunch should've been the high point. You went to McDonalds with your buddies. You are starting to cheer up. You forgot your money, but they spot you some. As you get out of the car at school you try to put some ketchup on your burger when you trip, sending the burger flying into a puddle of mud. With no time to get more food, you amble to your locker to get your books. Of course it's jammed, or maybe you just don't remember your combination. Either way, you're beaten. In your last class you are assigned to work with your crush on an assignment. On any other day this would've been a blessing. Today, it's a level of hell you would rather not mention. You smell, your hair is a rat's nest, you never brushed your teeth, and you are wearing the only clothes that were still somewhat clean: the ones you would never ever wear unless it was an emergency. All period your crush is inching away from you and shielding his nose when you speak to him. When the bell rings, you run to the bathroom for a break. Teary eyed, you look in the mirror, and see a big piece of crud in your teeth. Now, I'm not talking about a little piece of basil caught in your teeth. I'm talking about the mother of all pieces of your-entire-lunch-plus-the-kitchen-sink stuck between your two front teeth. Mortified and exhausted, you are glad it's over. You take the back way out of school so you can avoid as much human contact as possible. You walk home, relieved and tired from the day's antics and slouch down in a comfy chair to watch MTV. As they announce the upcoming show for 2 PM, your heart misses a beat... you forgot that there were two classes after lunch.

Simple Pleasures

I must say that today, along with many other days, I felt deprived. I felt deprived of the pleasure given to most students after a long, grueling week. A pleasure of being able to relax, yet ponder life's most important and worrisome issues in a caring and open atmosphere. This simple pleasure that I speak of is DSI. In my four full years here at LHS, I have been allowed one and only one Drama of Social Issues performance. However, I have somehow escaped the complete-downward-spiral-into-utter-depression caused by a lack of pleasure because I have other things to bring me up. Little Timmy wasn't that lucky; he missed every DSI and was never seen smiling. When he was little, his teachers never had to tell him to "Wipe that smile off his face"...He never smiled...ever. But I digress.

To return to my story, the other pleasures are things I know well. I know the excitement that follows when a note is left on the door to cancel class. I know what it is like to have my mommy tell me go back to sleep on a Wednesday morning because it is a snowday. I also know what it is like to go cruising to Kimballs on a hot June day after school to get some finger-lickin'-good ice cream. Yet the things I enjoy most and put a smile on my face are even simpler than these rare events. "Going to the bathroom for fifteen minutes" in the middle of Physics is a high scorer on my list. Whether these fifteen minutes are used to walk with a friend, go home, or meet a friend for a Dunkin' Donuts run, they are the highlight of my day. Or maybe having "Mannequin Wars" in Mrs. Craig's CPR class is even better. So even though you'll never see me at a DSI performance, you will always see me with a content smile on my face while I nap through Spanish, eat breakfast in Photo, or make a three course lunch at home during free-block.

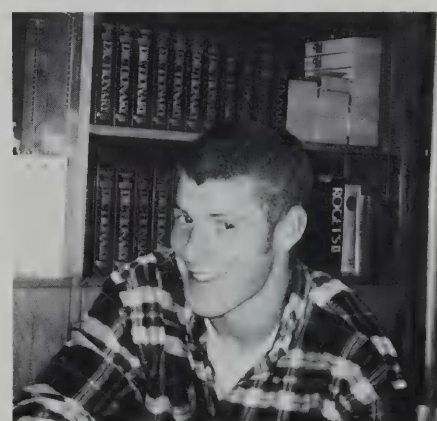

"When in doubt, just pick'em up and throw'em around." A.J. Flura & Nick Talarico

"You want me to be a yearbook model? I feel so special!" says a rapturous senior, Wenda Harris, while friend Abby Krich smiles, nods, and hopes it goes away.

Senior Adriana Schick is apparently giddy about acing her last physics test.

"Don't tell anybody I told you this, but you see those dictionaries behind me? They got some pretty dirty words in them..."
-Kevin Wolf

Emily Traverse tries to fathom how she'll pass tests in three major subjects all given on the same day... usually Friday.

"Isn't circular motion so hilarious?" laughs a caffeinated senior, Jocelyn Segal

Onlookers would never suspect that senior Su-Ping Yeh has outgrown her freshman ways: "I'm squishin' up my baby bumble bee. Won't my mommy be so proud of me..."

CYCLES

Cycles. We all know them. There's the bike kind, the washing machine kind, the "re-" kind, and the LHS kind. Cycles abound at LHS. From having Dr. Shohet freshmen year to having him senior year; from being a lowly freshman in high school to being an even more lowly, lonely freshman in college; from less work freshman year to more work junior/beginning of senior year to "less" work again during the second semester of senior year; cycles are a large part of LHS.

To the untrained eye, LHS may look like any other high school in America, but to those who have lived, experienced, loved, and hated this place, LHS is merely a series of cycles. We start off as freshmen, thinking that $2+2=5$ from reading 1984 and having Mr. Heidbrink. This cycles back to thinking $2+2$ must equal to five in Mr. O'Reilly's physics class so his worksheet answers will make sense. As freshmen, there is a certain lack of stress (or at least you know there was a lack of stress freshman year in retrospect, once you become a SAT/AP/Mr. Murray prone junior). There also is a certain lacking in suitable social behavior from the opposite sex. Girls are goo-goo over senior guys, as guys are over senior girls. No one from the same grade is interested in anyone else because they don't know anyone well enough. Well, this comes full circle. Save a few minor relationships (sorry to a few couples), senior year comes with no one in the senior class being interested in anyone else in the senior class (except for Mehran and Maggie, who are also interested in everyone else). This is because everyone knows everyone too well. Freshman who bat their eyes at you seem too young, so your life becomes reduced again, to that of a non-dating freshman. Cycles are factored into the make-up of the schedule too. Remember study halls? They gave way to free-blocks, but they exist during second half of senior year again. They simply are disguised under the names of Physics, English, Calculus, and History. Remember team teaching? The legends like Heidbrink, Perry, McCormack and Glew are hard to forget. Well, team teaching exists senior year too: with classes like Honors Nutrition, taught by Mr. Dunkin Donuts and Mrs. Glenn Eric's; classes like Level 1 Social Problems and those who cheer them, taught by Mr. Jerry Springer and Dr. Ricki Lake during freeblocks; we must not forget electives like procrastination through phys ed, taught by the nice people at Sports Center along with the students of LHS. Yes, team teaching makes a comeback.

Perhaps the biggest cycle of all is the workload cycle. The freshman science project and history research paper are child's play to the junior and senior who have SATs, APs, college applications, final exams, and Melrose Place to balance. Again, though, things come full circle for from February on - the work load for seniors is magically reduced by the God of Slump. Of course, social inferiority, major work, etc. does start to cycle again when all of us slumping seniors are rudely awakened at our respective colleges and universities. Enjoy the cycle and have a nice day.

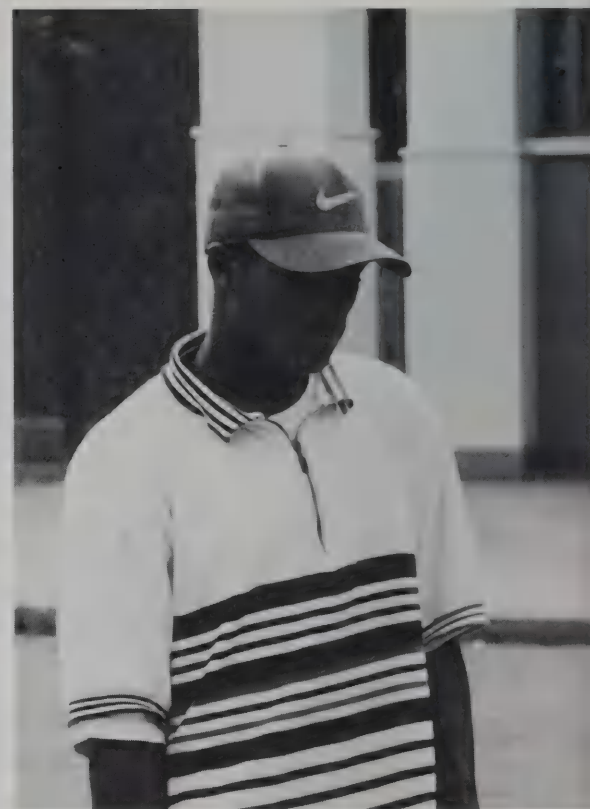

While observing the pattern of growth on the left, Will Dron thinks to himself, "Psh, no matter how hard you try, you'll never end up as kool as me."

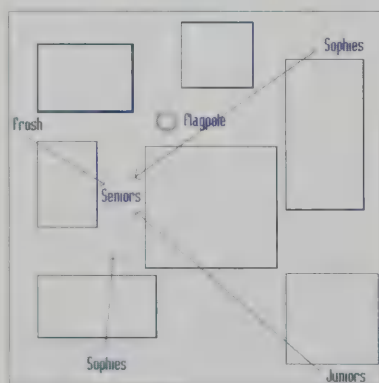

"WHOA!" says senior Joe DeMatteo, referring to the chart of growth on the left, "Will we all eventually end up being Sarah Platt?"

"Excuse me... KID... I don't think you belong here..." Ben Abrams

Terrell Talyor looks down and sighs with pity, knowing that the freshmen domination has commenced.

BATTLE in the QUAD

You'd think within a quad there would be enough room for four classes of 400 students, wouldn't you? Alas, just as the back seat in the elementary school bus was a coveted prize for the mighty fifth graders, the seniors, juniors, sophomores, and freshmen of LHS will remain forever in this limbo of quadrangle property rights. Yes, it's true that the seniors lament the golden days of shady quadrangle bliss which have passed into this era of stark and dusty desolation. The walls which once protected us from the ghosts of our shrimpy freshman pasts have crumbled, as we look the future generations of seniors square in the eyes. Oh, this essay has been written so many times before, you underclassmen grumble. Never before, however, has the intricate web of quad life been revealed. Read on.

Perhaps the more astute among you have noticed the subtle rotation of quadrangle ownership. First thing in the morning, even before Mr. Yelled arrives at school, the Mustard Seeds own the quad. More specifically, they own the flagpole, which serves as the central focus of their morning ritual - watching nostalgic ex-senior Ben Barrington climb up and down. Sometime later, at around 6:30, the first of the freshmen arrive, eager to begin a day of learning with some social activity. Upperclassmen, who remain in bed until 7:43 AM...er...have "car trouble," may not be aware of this phenomenon, but the freshmen officially rule the morning quad. Saved by the bell? I think so. From 7:45 on, the quad is composed of the open-campus kings (seniors) and queens (juniors) of the school, with the occasional rebellious prince (sophomores) frequenting the scene. Safeguarded by friendly Sir Mechem, the heirs to the world look down upon the cesspool cleaners (freshmen), and battle the dragons of ignorance. By the 2:25, all is in order, with the seniors in the left/central quad area, juniors mingling between the tree and the seniors, sophomores wedged between the raised beds and "bench-land" or blocking the main doors, and the freshmen playing duck-duck-goose over by the science building.

The quad has set the scene for so many memorable LHS moments. Yet, as a senior, I fear the inevitable post-graduation takeover. Our departure will plunge the system into anarchy. The siege of senior world is already being plotted, as these confiscated blue prints indicate:

How to prevent this gruesome battle? We seniors have to stick up for what is rightfully ours, and perhaps that means forgoing graduation and designating a roster of quad guards...eh, never mind that, just let 'em kill each other.

"Oh...look at them...so mature, good-looking, smart... When I grow up, I wanna be on that side of the quad too." -Kelly Makovich, Elizabeth Hurley

Ken Weinstein: Amazed by the fact that there's a freshman in the senior side of the quad.

With a simple glance, Evan Gilbert seduces yet another unsuspecting men-starved freshman.

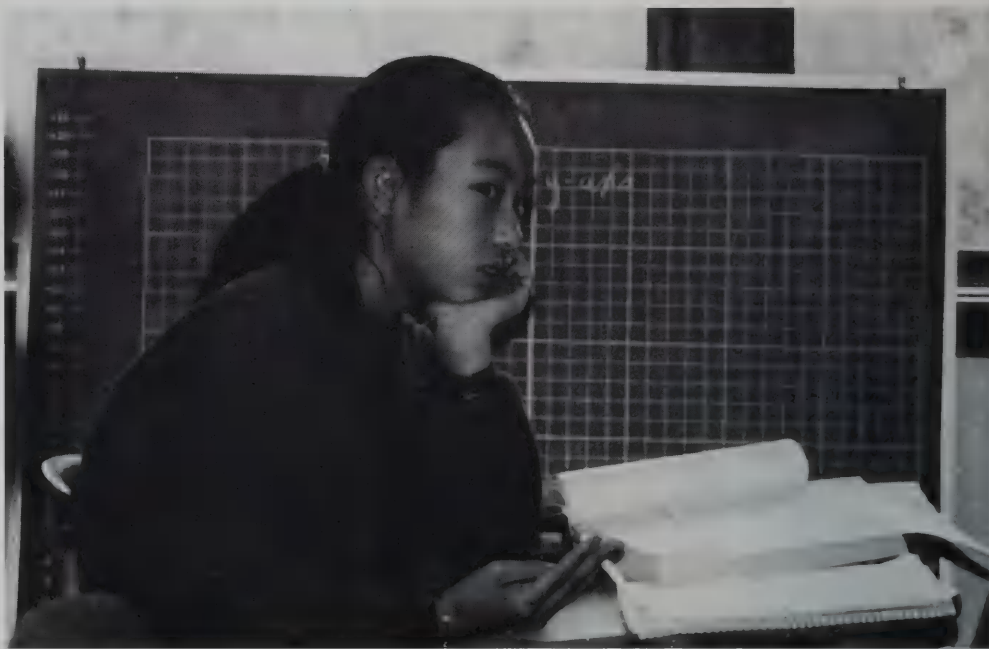

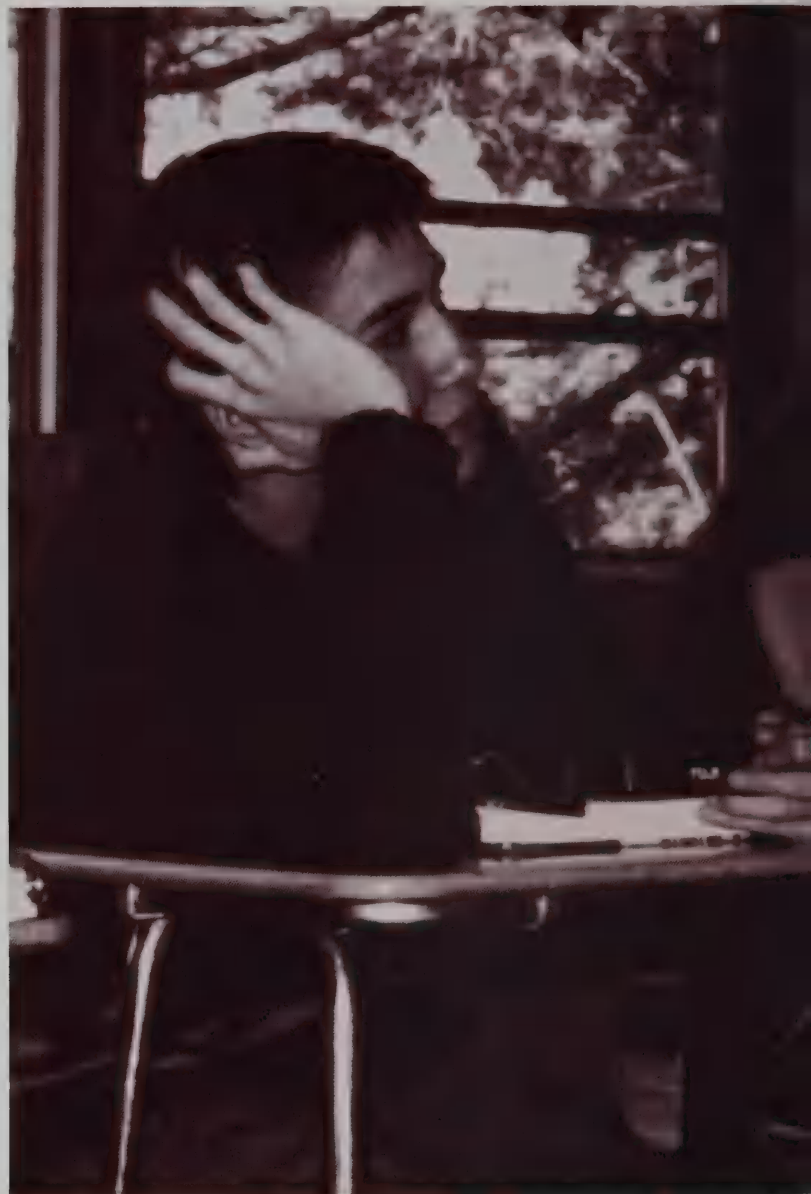

"Heh heh heh... underclassmen... here I come!!!" Says Alyssa Lynes as she dreams up 17 different ways to torture the inferior ones...

Everyone knows not to mess with Maggie Allan's bench.

Brain Pressure

So, I was feeling a little... oh, how would you say it, umm... STRESSED lately. So I decided to make myself a list of things to do this weekend. Let's just say it was long, very long. So here I am, Friday night, not enjoying myself nor partying hardy like I should be. Instead, I am sitting here, working, hoping to get enough boxes checked off on my list by Monday morning that I won't have to stay home from school just to finish my school work. Does this sound like something you have done? Well you shouldn't be proud! Anyway, what is left? Let's see... the first thing I need to do is clean my room and my desk. Anything that is still out tomorrow morning will get thrown away. Next: do my English reading, which, unlike Shohet claims, will NOT take me under 20 minutes. Then I should really do sheets J1 through J2 for Mr. O'Reilley. Now I'm not talking about 2 sheets. I am talking about from the FIRST J1 to the most RECENT J2 and everything in between. Then I should theoretically do my Spanish work. Then I really have to call that friend from this summer. I also have a half page term paper for Mr. "Let's spend this class talking about why we're so far behind the other classes" Lopez. Oh, and not to mention the problem set for Ms. "Who the heck is Punxsatawney Phil?" Masselam (whose class I failed last year for never doing the sets). What else? OH, while I'm at it, why don't I do some college applications, then why don't I donate a kidney to that needy kid in the hospital? Oh, oh, and I could send a care package to the hungry kids in.. umm, somewhere. And I could... make peace in the Middle East. And I could..... ZZZZZZZZZZ.

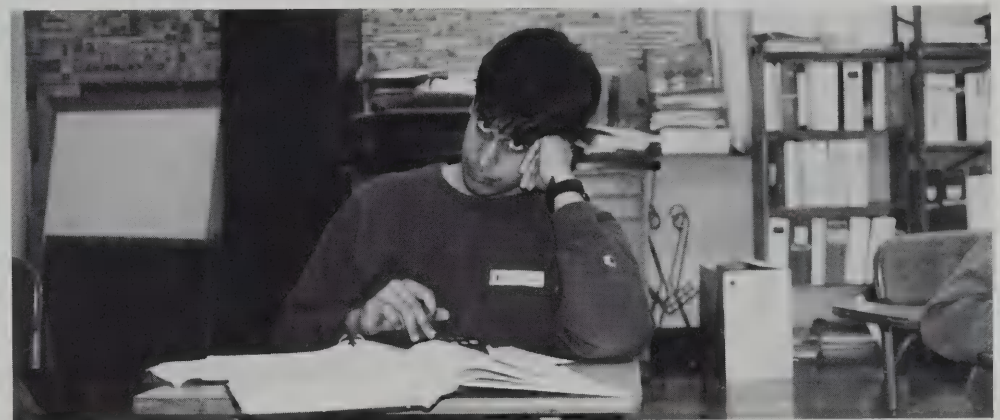

Obviously, the sun in Takuto Ueha's face isn't helping his stress induced migraine.

"I wanted a harder math class this year...but this is ridiculous, Mr. Rahman." -Jackie Ou

Daniella Massimilla can tell that Anh-Tuan Vu needs to spend less time playing video games and more time sleeping.

"Maybe if I sit a little closer to the music, the notes will diffuse into my head," moans senior Rachel Vogelzang.

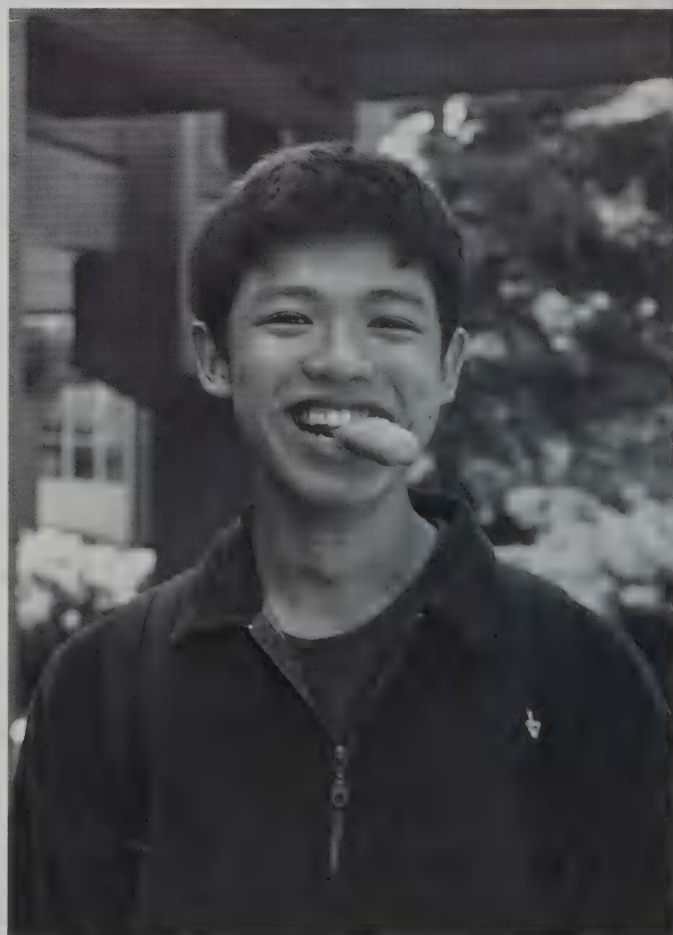

"What are YOU looking at? You want me to crush you with my 80 pound brain?"

-Mandar Mazumdar

"Hot diggitty... I need to get away from this stressful school... How does Spain sound?" wonders senior Bertrand Landel.

Finishing Touches

As the last days of our grand project dwindle down, we take the opportunity to look back at our years. For a few short months, we sit on top of the world, looking around the quad at the other works in progress, remembering the hardest days. Still, here it is: the chance to be a giant among men, the grandiose fruit of three years of labor. As we polish the edges of our newly finished product, we also see forward to bigger and better things. Indeed, one day the machine will be put to use, accomplishing great and unimaginable things. Right now, however, it shines in the sunlight as we put the finishing touches on it, and stand back to appreciate what we have done. The senior class – an achievement to be admired.

BRRRRRRRRRRRRRRRRRRRING!

"Finally! Third lunch! My stomach has been growling for the past two hours, and videos about freefall motion aren't exactly brain food. Hmm... I'm in the mood for a bagel, cream cheese, or maybe some pizza from F-House..."

Oh, if it were only that easy. You see, when you have third lunch, you're doomed. You are sentenced to devour the scraps left over from the hungry maniacs of the other lunches. The 1st lunch people are the worst enemy- they buy their food at 9:00 AM and save it to eat it in front of you during the class at the end of the day, just as you're counting down the seconds until you're set free to go eat yourself.

Ah, third lunch. Of course, there are no bagels left. There is no pizza left, except for that one congealed slice that has pieces of salad dressing dripped on it. It's freezing cold out so you don't want ice cream, the only cereal left is Raisin Bran, and they ran out of chicken patties and "meatball" subs an hour ago. What does that leave? The brown slop. Yes, you ALL know what I'm talking about- if you haven't been down to G House to come back with this tasty prize yourself, you've certainly seen someone else do it. It's runny, it's brown, it has pieces of what looks like the annoying hairs you pull of celery floating around in it. Actually, if you think about it, it looks like what you get when you drink milk if you're lactose intolerant. But it's all you've got- that whole search of the cafeterias made making a quick lunch run to the center impossible- there's only 10 minutes left until the next block.

There's a lesson to be learned from this. Those of you who still have time here - bring your own food! Just the smell coming from the kitchen in the morning alone should be enough of a deterrent from school lunch. You want something warm, you say? Bring soup from home and heat it up using Mr. Murray's microwave, or find a friend with a car; otherwise...

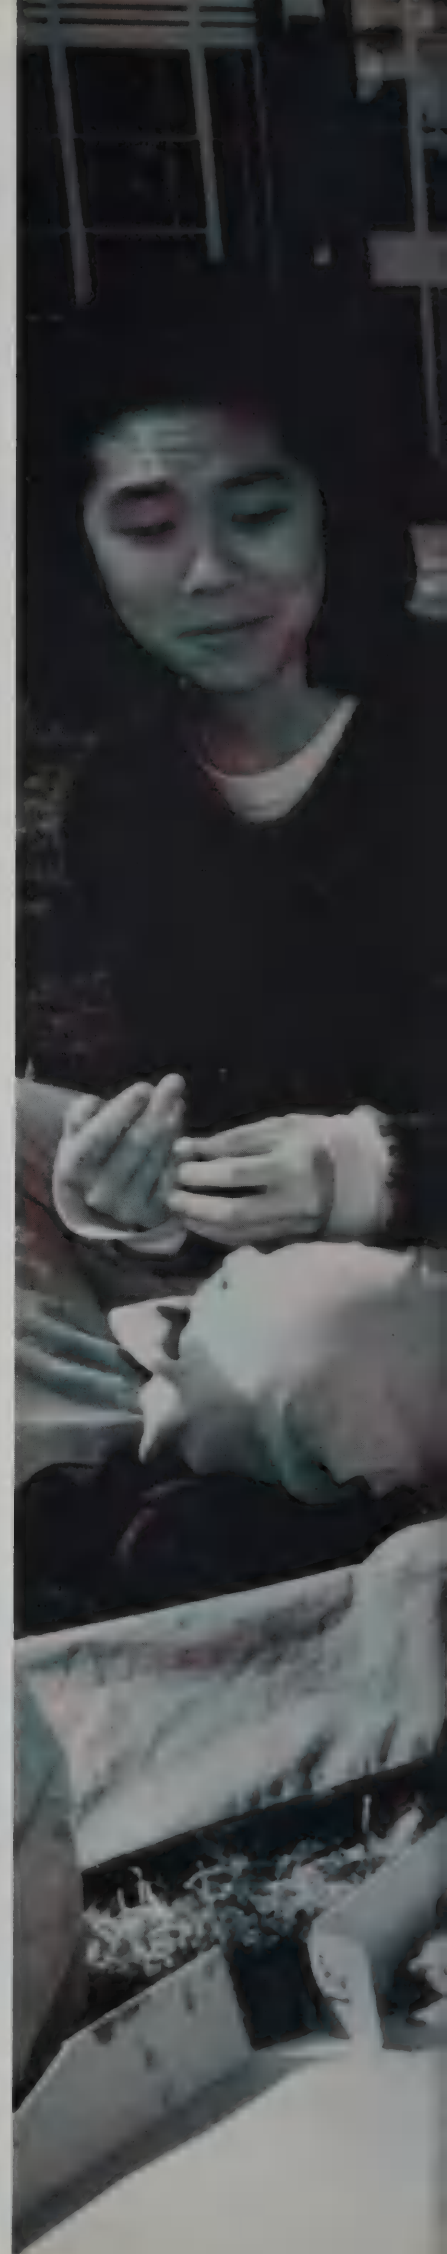

Maybe you'll like the brown slop. Those bean-soup things Chili's serves with their "Guiltless" meals looks just as nasty, but some folks will eat that too. I hear that if you smile while you're swallowing, it tastes like pineapple.

"Mmm... Bananas... Part of every complete third breakfast...uh...I mean... first lunch..."

Procrastination

It's 12:40 P.M. on a Tuesday. This article is due by 2:00 P.M., or I'm screwed, and I don't even have school today. What better example of procrastination?

Actually, I can think of lots of better ones. You're talking to the queen of lateness. I've taken "mental-health days" galore, and begged for many on extension. I'm also guilty of driving 80 mph through Boston on the night of Sunday, Nov. 1 at 11:45 P.M. to the South Station 24-hour post office to get my college application postmarked. But you know what I think? people like me...we're just that much more interesting for it.

Here's a test: which would you rather do...?

1. Saturday night:
 - a) Read ahead in English
 - b) study for that physics test
 - c) go out with your boy/girlfriend
 - d) go practice your clarinet
2. On Tuesday afternoon. You have only one assignment today...
 - a) Do that assignment right away
 - b) Go to the library to research your long-term science project
 - c) Do some extra-credit work
 - d) nap
3. On the day of your physics test... You didn't study:
 - a) Go take the test, and take the grade you deserve
 - b) Skip school... Mr. O'Reilly has a month-long grace period to make up tests anyway...
 - c) Attack Ken W. Einstein during your freeblock
 - d) Feign a heart attack
4. Your history project is due tomorrow. What must you, as a procrastinator, do?
 - a) Cry
 - b) Whine
 - c) call up your best friend and whine some more
 - d) pull an all-nighter
 - e) All of the above

...and for the real toughie. Are you really a procrastinator? Answer this:

Extra Credit: It's Veteran's Day. Do you:

- a) get your Christmas shopping done early
- b) parse some sentences with logs of adverb clauses
- c) conjugate some French verbs
- d) clean your room

Now THAT's hard... I don't know if even I, the almighty queen of lateness, could answer that one...

"Destiny is not a matter of chance, it is a matter of choice; it is not a thing to be waited for, it's a thing to be achieved."

-William Jennings Bryan

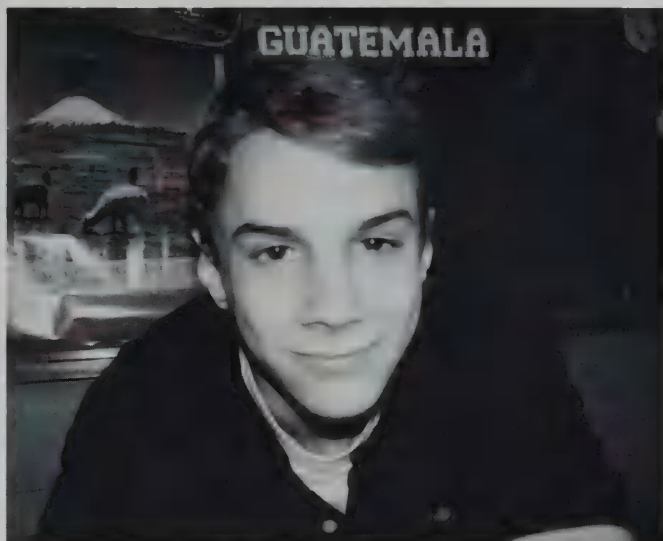

Had any trouble getting from J house to D house this year? You're not alone. For us seniors, looking down a hall full of little people in strange clothing brings back fearful memories of the Jawas of Tatooine. And when we recover from our amusement over the so-called 'freshman backpack' syndrome, we're faced with the difficulty of actually getting to class on time.

Just how is it done? It's quite simple, in fact. For many, all you need is brute force. Dive right in! Think of it as a mosh pit without music. You trample the 4-foot freshmen, barge through the herds of sophomores, stare down the haughty juniors, and dodge the passing football players. (During the off-season when blazing-yellow uniforms are no longer worn, those to be avoided are easily identified by physique and demeanor.)

While many may think these tactics crude and boorish for refined upperclassmen, remember: those who prefer to trail behind the crowds of laggards will always be late. Desperate times call for desperate measures!

Um... need any explanation???

Freeblocks...

The Ultimate Usage of

So it's September of your senior year and you finally have a car during your free block- the only thing that makes school worthwhile. What are you going to do?

Are you a...

*QUAD PERSON?: Usually seen milling around the flagpole at LHS wearing assorted athletic garb, enjoy socializing, flirting, gossiping, being photographed, and eating food provided by food people (see below).

*FOOD PERSON?: More adventurous than their quadrangle counterparts, food people are sent to forage for the pack. They use their food to gain the affection of the quad people. Can be spotted at local eateries such as the Food Court, Burger King, Via Lago, Bruegger's, and the Mobil Mart.

*LIBRARY PERSON?: Generally seen scurrying around the quad due to their discomfort in this environment; seek refuge in a more intellectual environment. Usually progress to own large corporations.

*PARKING LOT PERSON?: It is unclear whether members of this species ever have class. Permanent residence: ghetto end of parking lot. Enjoy trucks with good sound systems and establish a hierarchy by holding driving competitions for speed around the parking lot.

Well...let's see. During freeblocks, you can run off to get food, go home, or you can pose like a covergirl like Joanna Liberman.

As to the attention-starved individuals, such as Molly Powers, we've got nuttin' to say.

Abbe Barg redefines the phrase "tossing hair."

Hair is such a crazy concept. You can grow it long, shave it off, whatever, and it'll always somehow manage to return back to its original state. Kinda like Chef Boyardee beefaroni. But that's a whole different story. Anyway, back to hair. The great thing about being a senior is you have so much freedom, everything just seems little. One of those freedoms is that you can do all sorts of crazy things with your hair and people won't think you're a dork. 'Cause you're not. Right? Right! You own the school! That means that even if people think you look like a total reject, they will still say you look smashing. You could have sideburns from here to west of Mississippi and the freshmen would ask if they could feel them, to which you would reply an affirmative "NO." And senior slump means doing MORE crazy stuff to your hair. You can dye it, braid it, or if you really wanna get your mojo working, you can don a Flock of Seagulls hairdo. This is only for the heppiest of the hep kats out there. And what if you can't think of anything? Just sport a cap and sunglasses a la Pet Shop Boys. It really doesn't matter. 'Cause in the end, nobody really cares. So now that I think of it, hair's pretty lame...

A Final Word

From our president

Dear Class of 1999,

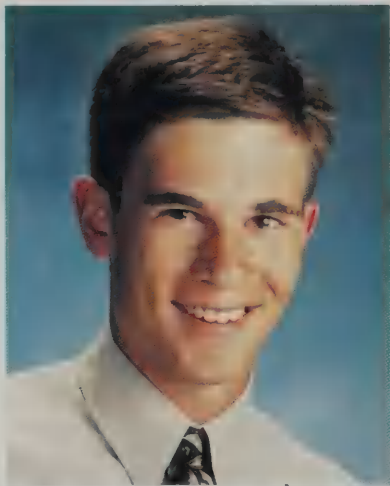

I think we all, in some way or another, still feel like freshmen. First impressions, as the saying goes, last forever.

But first impressions, however forceful they may be, are only personal. They are self-judgements rather than the evaluations of others. It is the last impression which really counts, the last impression which endures, even after the years have passed and the occasional reunion is the sole link between most of us.

One of the greatest gifts of life is, I believe, the power of the present. The past is unalterable, but the present easily molds the future, sometimes almost too easily. So in the remaining months before you go to college or work or wherever you choose, don't hesitate to give that old friend from elementary school a call, and don't forget to say good-bye to that teacher whose advice you've followed since freshman year. A poor lasting impression is something nobody wants to leave behind.

Good luck, class of 1999.

I am,
Yours sincerely,
Jonathan Amar

Little Did You Know

OK seniors, your time here has come to an end, but what do you have to show for it, hmm? Sure you have that stylish cap and gown, your plans for the future, and an education that can take you anywhere, but do you know what really matters? Have you been paying attention to what goes on around you each day for the last four years as you walk down the cramped hallways of LHS? We'll just see about that.

Your first days here you got confused and cried in the corner for your mommy after trying to walk from J house to G House downstairs. As an upperclassman you were to suave to be bothered by this and rationalized that walking upstairs was better for your quads anyway. Well, little did you know, the "teachers rooms" blocking the passageway were really the base of operations for the intricate and devious money laundering scheme. The same money laundering operation which forced Ben Franklin's head to blow up and move over on the $100 bill!

The next time you got lost at school was Sophomore year when you tried to find a way around those crowded Science building staircases. The third staircase next to the Science office looked so inviting, but it had an ominous "Do Not Use These Stairs" sign on the doors. You bravely shoved the door apart as you marched up the stairs, passing the 55¢ soda machine from the late SAC on your way. Shocked as you reached the top, you saw the librarians on their "coffee" break making some... home videos. "So that's why we aren't allowed to go anywhere we wanted on the internet, they didn't want us watching their videos." Nudge nudge, wink wink, know what I mean? Know what I mean?

Junior year you wandered into Mrs. Messalem's Chemistry class on February 14th. As the 4th annual Punxatawny Phil Singing Valentine came her way she went into convulsions and started mumbling something about a fat lady out to get her. Just the, Punxatawny ran in and revealed his true identity to be "Phil and the Antler Boy, with a little help from a friend."

Senior year, as you finished your applications, slump set in, and you started walking even slower in the halls, you remarked at how crowded they had become. You always thought it was because class size was going up, but now that you are taking your time to look around, you see that the walls are actually closing in on us. Good thing you are getting out while you still can.

So on you last days here, enjoy the new knowledge that you have. Walk through the halls knowing that there actually used to be multiple phones in the main hall. Take a break in your Senior Quad. Sit under the cherry tree, look around... and wonder why the Senior Quad is full of underclassmen and only has three sides.

Derek Etkin and Rachel Rutishauser discuss the possible conspiracy that may be taking place as they speak...

Paul Yang contemplates getting to his next class in the shortest amount of time.

Ever heard of the story that Athena was born from Zeus' forehead? Well, Bryan Wilson was born from John Lin's pair of Oakleys.

You'll never guess...but the branches on Andrew Griffith's head work as a chick magnet...that's why Molly Powers is bowing to him.

"You know," says Amy Gillis to Tracy Cole, "I think they're up to something..."
 "Who's they?"
 "THE JANITORS!!!"

ETS Hell

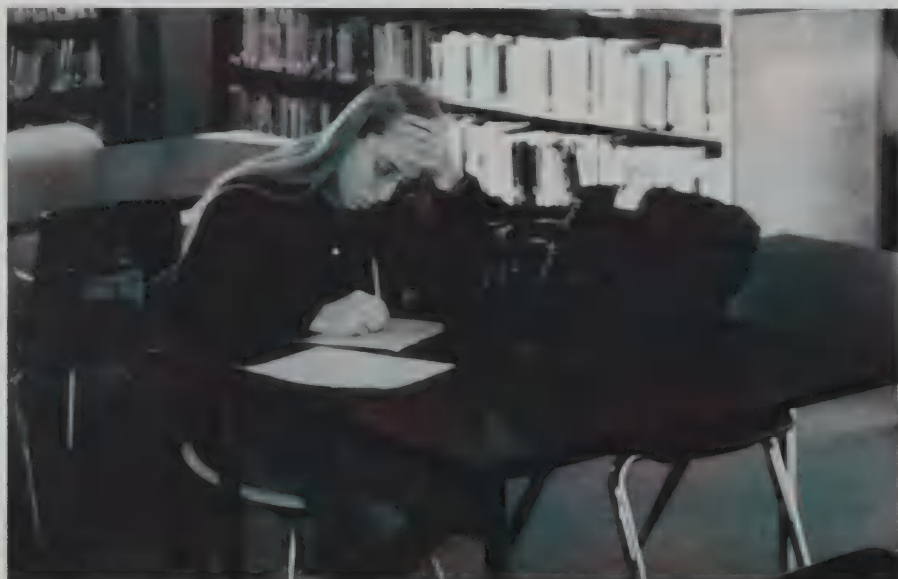

Most would agree that the LHS's classrooms (with the exception of Mr. Rahman's greenhouse) remain at a relatively reasonable temperature for the greater part of the school year. Only the juniors and seniors, however, are aware that on select Saturdays, our cozy classrooms are transformed into undulating fiery pits of anguish and destruction. For those of us who are graduating on 6-6-99, this self-inflicted hell is over(for now anyway). As for juniors, they've only just begun, but the sophies and frosh can only read and contemplate the horrors that stand before them.

Regulated by the soulless, money-hoarding fiends of the C.E.E.B. (Council for Expensive Ecstasy Butchering), these weekends of torture are financial sinkholes, requiring months of overpriced preparatory books and courses. The terrifying sessions themselves cost money, yet we roll out of bed early on a Saturday, eat a poptart, and trudge to school to determine our futures. Two weeks later, though we won't admit it, we waste more money on the critical phone call, feeding the avaricious ETS monster with daddy's Visa Card.

Yet, we all seem to be falling prey to masochism, as we return to the inferno month after month. Nobody enjoys the hellish ordeal, but we are addicted to achievement; if we fail, we try until we succeed- if we succeed, we go back to succeed better. Worst of all is that after attending these exams, students are reduced to mindless discussion of meaningless analogy questions for a minimum period of three days, postmortem. This required discussion stage results not only in heightened tensions among the brainwashed victims, but also in the possibility that they might be impaled with plastic lunch forks by their agitated peers.

No lucky shirts, fuzzy socks, removable shoes, "THINK" bars, or tissue boxes can save you from the three hour hell exams composed by the Evil Testing Serpent. Someone close at hand is bound to be sniffing, coughing, grumbling, fidgeting, or spitting throughout the examination. No doubt you'll get a swine of a proctor who mandates alphabetical order and, after surrounding you on all sides by the 4 Medford students, insists upon crocheting an afghan while eating carrots at the teacher's desk.

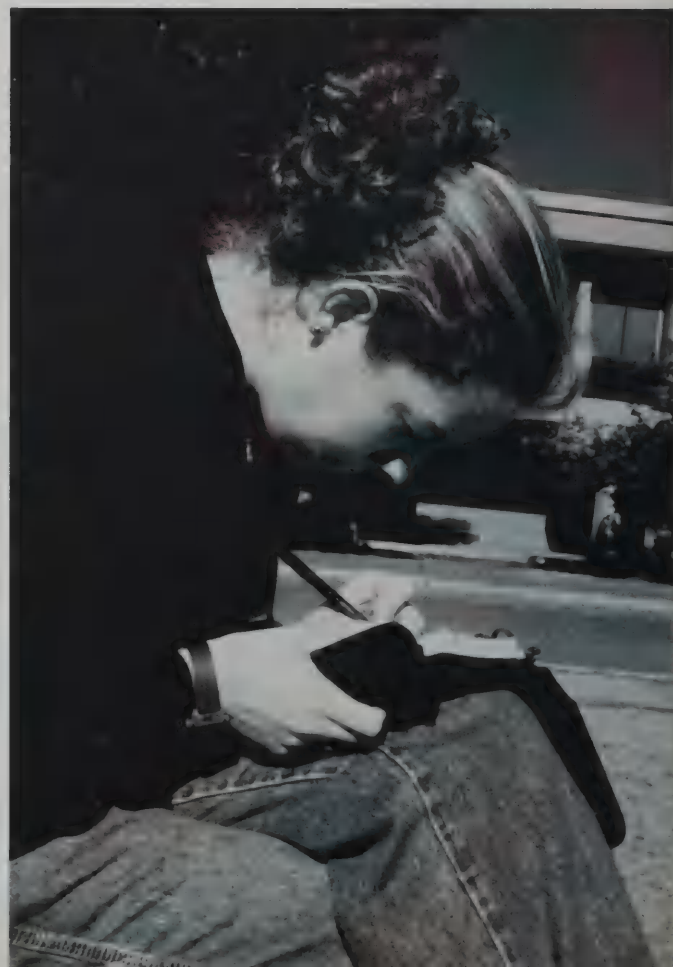

Unfortunately, these monthly hell-fires do not show any sign of abating, rather, with new M.C.A.S. (Monkeys Chuckles and Aggravates Sophomores) testing required for sophomores, the days of judgment will come even more frequently. So pretty much, underclassmen, your entire lives will depend on tests. Don't worry too hard though; these infernal ETS exams don't count for anything that ultimately matters in the big scheme of thing, so you can be a perfectly good person without going to hell. Hey, in the real world, you don't get 200 points just for filling in your name.

Just remembering that she has to take SATs tomorrow morning, Emily Zeiring slaps her forehead as she skips class to study in the library.

2:25~7:00	Study for AP
7:00~11:00	Study for SAT I
11:00~11:15	7 worksheets for Mr. O'Reilly

2:23~2:25	Write in this stupid notebook...

You think only senior guys can stalk other girls? Wrong! Rachel Vogelzang's pretty good at stalking underclass boys too.

"I know where you live."

-Nate Schoman

STALKERS Stalkers

I'd like to use this space to comment on a very serious topic concerning a major upper/underclassmen conflict we face everyday at LHS. I'm not talking about hazing, of course, given that we seniors didn't have to sign the hazing forms this year (score!). Rather, an even more distressing trend has come to the attention of the senior women: the stalking of freshmen girls by senior guys.

Perhaps this statement comes as a surprise to innocent freshmen, living in their own private worlds of senior idolization. If they knew the extent to which our men are drooling after them, however, the freshmen wouldn't be so quick to bow in worship to the kings of the class. In denial, LHS? Other seniors from years past have been known to leave candy and flowers on door steps and call at odd times of night. Even unnamed yearbook photographers have been taking advantage capitalizing on their post, using it as an excuse.

Why this interest in the new blood? Could it be a lacking on the part of senior females? Hardly! We are some of the most attractive, desirable, and talented women to ever pass through this high school. If anything, our male counterparts' sprouts from feelings of inadequacy. I blame this outrage partially on the lack of segregating foliage in the main quad. Some freshgirls could conceivably be mistaken for upperclassmen, and with all of them in open view, tempting the wandering eyes of our impressionable senior men, it's no wonder that we're losing members of our flock.

In any case, as an available (might I add, foxy) senior lady, I object! We, the choice picks of the school, deserve better. Experience, physical maturity, and, thus, natural selection favor us over skinny freshmen. We have not given you senior boys the best years of our lives to be exchanged for new goods. Obviously, you're only stalking these girls to assert your powers the schools' dominant males, so why don't you leave the vulnerable freshman alone. Please! Powerless to the system, we have no other options! We're feeling lonely, and shafted, and prom- dateless, and it's ALL because that stubborn double standard makes it impossible for us to go after any of these cute new freshman boys.

ALL THOSE !@#$$% Decisions

Sometimes it seems like they'll never end. The decisions start over the summer. For most seniors those decisions are about college. It starts as parents, a.k.a. "college guide book pushers," start asking the never ending questions about which colleges you plan to apply to. Should you apply early? Should you write or type your application? Of course, it's not as simple as that. In between you have to put up with annoying parents who have suddenly become college admission officers and either think that you won't get in to any of the schools you applied to or think that you will get in to all of the schools you applied to. Also, there are those pesky Lexington High School students who simply want to talk about college. Trying to keep up in classes, sports and other extracurricular activities is difficult while trying to balance all those decisions relating to your future. There are also decisions about who you will ask to write your recommendations. Do you ask the teacher whose class you got straight A in and thinks you're a genius or the teacher who gave you a bad grade, but knows you have "character?" Soon the focus becomes what you should write your college essay on. You never realized how difficult it could be to portray the "real you" in 500 words or less. After the acceptance and rejection letters arrive, you have to decide where you want to go to college and whether or not you want to have a giant bonfire with all of the rejection letters.

Not all decisions made during senior year are college related. In October you have to decide whether to go to the Halloween Dance or Band Night, since thanks to the top notch scheduling committee at LHS, they have both been scheduled for the same night. In December you must make the all important decision of whether or not to attend the Snowball and if attending, whom should you go with? Of course in May you must decide with whom you will go down in history as taking to your senior prom. Alas, soon all these monumental decisions will be behind us and the biggest decision will be Dunkin' Donuts or McDonalds, Springer or Bond during free block.

So basically Emily Traverse is down to two choices: devour the cafeteria food herself, or let the seagulls do the dirty work for her.

"OK...I've got it all planned out. You see, if I take both you AND Sarah to the prom, we'd be the biggest couple there!"

Mis Amigos

You walk through the main quad and someone jumps on your back, putting you in a "sleeper" hold. Who else could it be, but one of your so called friends? Maybe you met them in high school or maybe you have been friends since you both were in diapers, but what makes high school fun is the friends. They're zany, unpredictable, caring, funny, and annoying all at the same time. Who else could embarrass you by telling the girl or guy that you like that you like him or her? Who else could get you in trouble in class for laughing at them? Who else can you compete with in school or on a sports field? Who else is there to be supportive after a tough loss or breakup? Who else is always at your house, acting as if they own it? Who else can pig pile on you like they can? Who else can make you laugh, cry, smile and think like they can? Yes, your friends are truly unique and special. Friends are there to borrow your last ten bucks, to complain, to listen to you complain, to gossip with and to let you know that there is more to high school than books and grades. Sometimes you may fight, but true friends are there through the good the bad and the ugly. Sometimes they are there when you don't want them to be, but they are always there, a part of your life that may remain so for life.

Where Did We Go WRONG?

Remember 8th grade? If you even thought there was going to be a snow day the next day, you didn't bother to do your homework. It didn't matter though, because you didn't have any homework anyway. The next morning, you woke up at six o'clock to try and analyze the cancellation patterns. You even knew that Lexington came after Leominster on the canceled schools list. You spent the day blissfully trudging around the neighborhood with the other kids on the street.

Freshman year, you got the cancellation lowdown from Mr. Yelland who has never guessed wrong in all 100 years he has worked at LHS. You didn't even bother to set your alarm because you knew he would be right, and you were still exhausted from staying up until 10:30 Tuesday night finishing your outside reading project. Instead of hanging out with the local kids, you convinced your parents to strap on the snow chains and cart you 10 miles across town to where your new friend from the other middle school lived.

The next year, being the mature sophomore that you are, you no longer look forward to spending the day off in the snow. You were just thankful that your bio test was postponed. You could have used a little more time to study, so you decided to spend the day indoors. Cellular respiration and photosynthesis meant nothing to you when your friends started calling, and you spent the rest of the day on the phone.

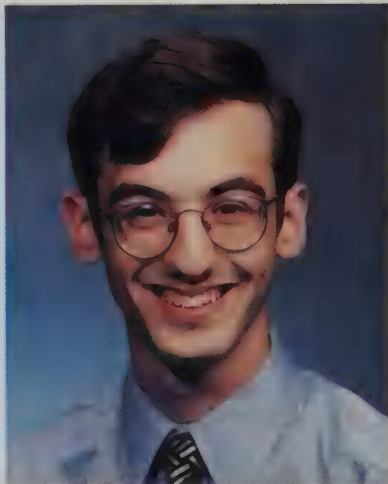

By the time 11th grade rolled around, you needed the snow day because it meant sleep. You still hadn't turned in your bio project from the year before, and your history term paper was due the next day. Reading an e-mail from a frantic friend, you discovered that you needed ten more sources to be above the minimum requirement for the paper. You proceeded to waste three hours at Amazon.com searching for books you could use to pad your bibliography.

Senior year, you were so overwhelmed with college applications and essays that you didn't even notice that it had begun to snow. As you sat at your computer typing the 857th page of your autobiography, you got a strange feeling that the night had been much too long. You wandered out of your room and discovered your siblings sitting in front of the television eating Kraft Dinner and watching Jerry Springer. Confused, you asked your mother what was going on. She pointed out the window where you saw the neighborhood kids playing in the snow. You recalled that you used to do the same on snow days, and wondered, "Where did we go wrong?"

PRECIOUS THINGS ARE VERY FEW,
LIKE THE FRIENDSHIPS I MADE WITH YOU.

The Extra Commandments

Things You Should Know by Now

The Top 15 Things That Senior Boys Should Know

1. Look at my EYES when I speak.
2. Wearing the same gym clothes all year is not an impressive feat.
3. Requirement #1: learn how to dance.
4. Katie Holmes is cool.
5. Do not abruptly end phone conversations with "Gotta go. bye. -click-" unless you have a social death wish.
6. Now that there's soap in the boys rooms, use it.
7. Talent is sexy (and dressing well is a talent).
8. We go to the bathroom in groups to talk about YOU.
9. When a girl says she doesn't want to dance, it means that she has someone else in mind.
10. If I say I'm too busy, it means I won't make the time for you.
11. No one ever picked up a girl by spending a 20 minute lunch block at McDonald's.
12. Lethal Weapon 4 is not a romantic movie.
13. The fate of the Patriots does NOT depend on you witnessing every play.
14. The guys on the Abercrombie ads are hot, but the world would be boring if you all looked like that.
15. My body is a temple, now get down on your knees and pray.

The Top 15 Things That Senior Girls Should Know

1. Haircuts are inherently bad.
2. It only takes two minutes to change for gym.
3. There are two kinds of shoes: sneakers and dress shoes.
4. The plot of Dawson's Creek is not important, neither is the plot for Baywatch.
5. "How nice" is code for "Who cares?"
6. You throw like a girl.
7. Circle of Friends was not a good movie, even if your boyfriend said he liked it.
8. Baseball isn't boring. Embroidering is boring.
9. When a guy says he doesn't want to dance, it means he can't.
10. "N'SYNC" has no music talent.
11. Neither does Carmen Elektra. But that doesn't matter.
12. The words "you're" and "right" can never coexist.
13. There is more to football than the player's butts.
14. Death Wish 4 is indeed a romantic movie.
15. Gas is on the right, brake is on the left.

"Oh girls...Look at me...please?"

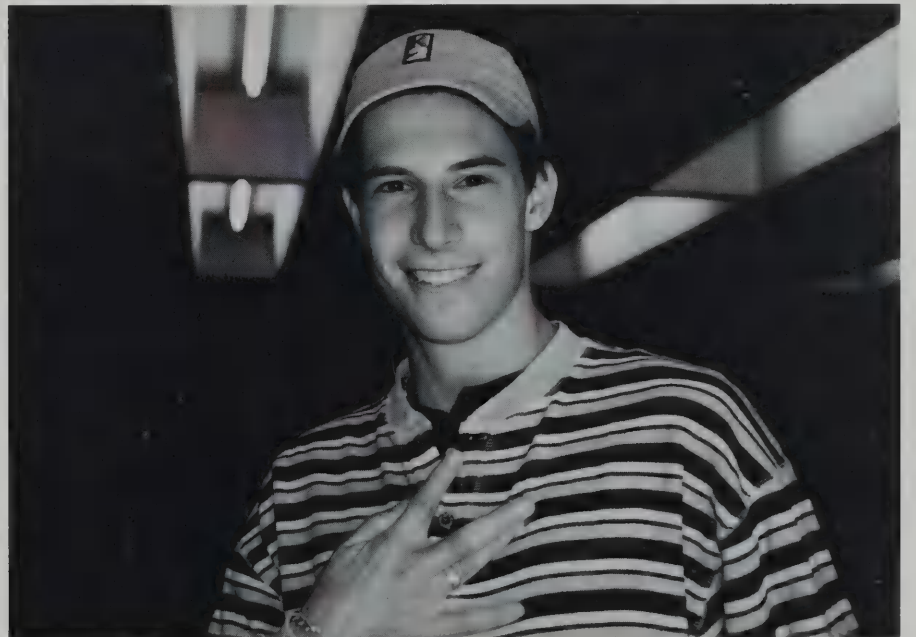

-Milan Raj

"Are you serious?" Asks Elizabeth Shapiro to the cameraman, "You TAPE Baywatch?"

Staring into space, Jason Massello tries to understand the ever-so-important question: What do girls mean when they say, "You just don't get it."

OH SURE, Michelle Menovich may look innocent, but who knows what she's really thinking.

As for you, Jared Seaquist, please read the article on this page. It shall teach you that chicks simply don't dig the West Side.

Ken Weinstein, this is what you get for messing with Yule Kashat.

Arl Goldman finds time leather jacket a tight fit.

It's not late, Spencer Hutchinson! The test is in five minutes!!!

Walking through the main quad, Mike Fleming puts his hat on as he steps into senjidi territory.

Mehran Ahmadi: "auuufaid."

After realizing that she can't dominate all the men in the high school, Ann Galkhnik thinks to herself: "Just wait... one day, you'll ALL be mine."

A Note To the Little Ones

We know what you're thinking. You're looking at the yearbook with its huge, full page pictures of real live upperclassmen and you're thinking, "Gee whiz, I want to be a senior when I grow up." Well, take heart, youngsters, because your cries are about to be answered. Yes, it's true: the seniors of this school actually can hear noises made by things other than their egos. While normally no self-respecting, studly upperclassman would do this, we have decided to indulge you with the secrets of Lexington High School. Freshmen, here's the deal. Your days as an overconfident 8th grader are long since over, and by now you have had the humbling experience of holding the door for sever seven-foot-four seniors who could easily kill you using only a parking permit. The good news is that those days of sheer humiliation are over. You can now find E House without even looking at your LHS map. Still, we must warn you, there remain hard days ahead. In the next year, you will face:

- the marathon of double block bio
- the startling conclusion that only one year ago you were the same size as that ant you just missed stepping on, and
- another schedule that has study halls

So for those hardships we would like to express our sympathy. At least you're not about to be a Junior. That's right, Sophomores, I'm talking to you now. You're about to enter the infamous Junior Year, wherein you learn that you can't actually go anywhere during freeblocks, that homework is not a responsibility but a way of life, and that Mrs. Masselam is stalked by an insane biochemist who calls himself Punxatawney Phil. And remember, kids, eating a McDonald's extra value meal in less than four minutes may cause indigestion, but it's still better than a G House chicken patty. Especially if you wash it down with a McFlurry.

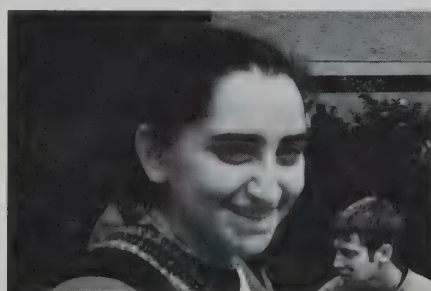

Now, as to the Juniors, good times await you. You are finally past the insufferable hours of "Adolescent Health" and Driver's Ed, and you can see your way clear to your independence. Sure, you do still technically have ALL your college applications to do, but that shouldn't concern you when you have Law & Order to worry about. Who cares if you don't go to college? Neither did Bill Gates! Let's be serious, though. We all know that once you get the early work done, senior year is paradise. Just look how Jon Amar turned out. One day, underclassmen, you too can be like Jon Amar, a true hero, an LHS senior.

"You may eventually become seniors," declares Jay Kasparian to some underclassmen, "but you'll never be as sexy as me."

Listen to the words of wise Jenny Staulk, underclassmen. "Thou shall not cross my path."

"Sure Jay, you think you're hot, but you're not as hot as me!" Says Stephany Collamore, as Brandon McDonold looks at her with some doubt in his eyes.

"When I was a freshman, I told myself that I'd grow up to be a senior. But now that I'm a senior, I wish I could shrink down to be a freshman again..."

-Ami Karkar

Drafting THE PLAN

Any high school youngster will tell you that the early years of high school are not as easy as the seniors pretend they are. Countless freshmen and sophomores slave long hours to produce their term papers and science projects. That is, to grind out the foundations of their intellects. These early years are the years of seemingly unrewarded labor, but the future is at hand. These foundations are solid as stone.

Roberto Rullo: Working intensely with his mojos on Shana Pressman, trying to get her to...uh... have... coffee with him...

Terrell Brown: The man with a plan minus the man.

"Yippee!!!! Time for History!!!" Says the enthused Tanaz Sharifnia.

The mind track of a junior always seems to lead back to that big parking lot of freedom. Somehow we always manage to escape the four wall cages we've come to call our classrooms. But with freedom there comes a conscience: that trip to McDonald's or that chemistry homework we forgot to do the night before. Then the bigger question arises...movie or SAT studying? It's a hard decision and we may lose a few classmates along the way, but most of us would agree...The movie...about SAT's, of course.

Seriously though, if junior life were that easy, we'd stay back forever, but notice we like to move on. Sure we've ditched those study halls, the majority of us have our licenses and a few have cars, but we also have a year that will determine our future academic career...ahhhhhhhh... so much stress, and too little time. Leave it to us though...We've pulled it together... Yup, of course, 'cuz we're the class of 2000.

Kate Bonner-Jackson predicts how big she will be after her junior year.

Grant Dunn is enraged that his school bus is leaving without him.

Sam Rosen and Kasim Te secretly share their love for classical music.

"Hey! Are they listening to Bruch Concerto No. 1 Op. 26 without me?!?!?" wonders a jealous Carol Chow.

Sophomores 2001

AKA Wise Fools

Sophomore year is a little bit like a ten-month stay in purgatory. The limbo in which we delicately balance is so close to both the heaven of being an upperclassman and the living hell that is the life of a degraded freshman. Although the jump from our first to second year has brought us some of the respect that we've deserved all along, the administration still gives us no more freedoms than the common, backpacking freshman. On top of all this that we've been dealt, we don't even get recognized as the true first graduates of the new millennium. Those in the class of 2000 get the credit. Though there are many more disadvantages to being stuck between freshman and junior year, there are a few things that we've gained that also had to be recognized. Over the summer we learned that we won't be crucified if we don't carry all of our textbooks in our backpacks all day, and that jumping in a junior's car to get lunch at McDonald's is sometimes worth the risk of getting detention.

We're the neglected middle children of the family, the Jan Bradys of LHS, screaming for attention. But no matter what we do, high school Nirvana is a long way away, and for now, we're stuck in the middle.

"Oh goodie!! Time for some 'Hemo, the Magnificent!!!"

-John Mirabella

Michelle Geany and Matt Claise wonder whether to choose the buffet or the sit-down dinner on the Sophomore Cruise.

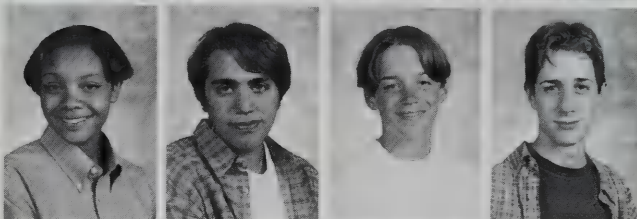

Sam Gnatovich, trying to outdo Michealangelo's David, happily creates his "masterpiece."

Building THE Structure

Ahh, the faculty. The worldly sages who impart upon the eager works in progress their vast knowledge. These are the selfless souls who take the time from their lives to help build the unfinished. For years, these individuals have practiced preaching and prancing until their students are honed into the best people they can be. So is it any wonder, then, that the works of art we call high school students turn out so well-crafted? The faculty. The veteran builders who make it all possible.

Putting in OVERTIME

After hours projects and activities reflect the unique natures of those who create and participate in them. Students give of themselves to expand their minds and add defining elements to life. While some stage plays, others celebrate foreign cultures, publish a newspaper, fill the world with music or wonder why they even attempt to play chess with Mandar. Many work harder than they do during the school day. Although sleeping during X-Block or going home after school sometimes look like better options, in the end, “overtime” is primetime at LHS.

Cast members of the musical "Rags" gather around their companion, Jonah Mitropolis, to listen to his tale.

"Trust me, I'm a senator," says Junior Josh Champney as he descends from his home in the clouds to make sure that there is liquid soap in every bathroom.

Sorting through underclass pictures with fellow sophomore Joo-Hee Chung, Christine Wang laughs as she says, "Yearbook, does the fun ever start?!"

Peer Mediators

What it all comes down to is that we're hear to help you. We want to help you resolve your problems. We listen because we care. We hold your truths in the strictest of confidence and respect your side of the story. This is your only high school experience and we want to help you enjoy it without fearing anyone. We aren't trying to save the world, but we are helping to make it a more tolerant place. We want you to realize that everyone is entitled to their opinion but not entitled to force their opinion on you. Your conflict can be with anyone, from a peer to someone in the administration. We have trained mediators for all types of conflicts. We're trained to get to the root of your problem, to help you plant another seed and start brand new. This club is not a joke and neither are you. If at any point in your high school career you need us, just know that Peer Mediation is hear for you.

The Writing Workshop

If you enter the library, turn right, pass the copier, and are prepared to venture into the territory of three menacing secretaries, you may find the Writing Workshop room. True, the cubicle sized concrete lined hovel is not the most homey, but within our walls one of 21 editors sits with a red pen, ready to edit the papers of any soul who comes through our door. Come to Ms. Weisel's room Wednesday morning and you'll find a few of us huddled around our steaming coffee mugs squinting and shivering and brushing up our editing skills. We give up our free blocks and our sleep to help you, the student in need. Come visit us, though, and you'll see how much fun unacknowledged community service can be. Just bring your thesis, your evidence, and an open mind and we'll do our best to serve you.

Just returning from the local Burlington Coat Factory, editor Bharat Ramamurti and writer Nick Barnaby model their new evening wear for the next edition of FORUM.

Well, here it is. It's big. It's beautiful. It's Forum. And if it's out there, you will probably find it in Forum, LHS's largest and newest student newspaper. All sorts of articles make their way into the packed pages of our sections. We know you only read the humor section, but anyway...

Forum brings new life to journalism at LHS. Writers from all walks of life write for the paper on a regular basis, including more freshmen and sophomores than we can count. Forum merges the traditional aspects of the student newspaper, like coverage of Lexington's political scene, with new and exciting features like movie and theatrical reviews. Forum, the new and untraditional choice in student newspapers - Let your voice be heard.

The Java Club

Newly spawned children of the Sun Burlington Megacomplex, these power-coders are bound together by their knowledge of the Java programming language. At their meetings, led by Albert "The Chauffeur" Roos, they regularly laugh at others' warnings of cross-platform incompatibilities and indulge in the pleasures of object-oriented programming. Be aware: these men will run our world sooner than you think, and they will earn five times as much money as you will ever make before they hit thirty.

EPIIC

What is EPIIC? EPIIC, which stands for Education for Public Inquiry and International Citizenship, is a program sponsored by Tufts University that gives students a chance to look at international issues. Each year a topic, such as last year's "Refugees and Global Migration" is selected by the program's directors at Tufts. Participating high schools are then given a group to represent, such as an international organization, government, or political faction. After doing research and reading the information provided by Tufts, we go to the annual EPIIC symposium. There we represent the interests of the group assigned to us in a simulated gathering of many players involved in the area we studied. So, if you ever feel the urge to fight against the oppression of native peoples by a monolithic government or make political power plays and international alliances as a world power, swing by and see what EPIIC is up to.

When you think of yaks, images of Tibet, yak butter, and drama club come to mind. Why yak butter? To answer that question, let's just understand the concept of how yak butter is made.

Mission One: The Search for Yak Butter.

Looking through your guide book, you will see a picture of an African Parrot, most commonly known as the African Parrot. This could play a huge role in the creaming of the butter. "It almost killed," reflected drama leader David Frankel.

The Drama Club helped in inspiring many blooming young actors and actresses to take on tasks like no other. I'm not talking about Yak Butter.

Mission Three: Fighting the Cliché!

We are not just the average Drama Club (oooooh, cliché). But seriously folks, we children of the stage, learned more than we thought. We don't just read the libretto, we work the libretto! (Work it, work it!) We connect with the true characters we contain, and express them without the facades of everyday life. We have discovered a wee bit more about ourselves along the brutal path, and in turn, know less than what we started with.

ARE YOU A PART OF DRAMA CLUB?!

(Well, you should be.)

OTAS is a group that serves two purposes: alcohol awareness and having fun(sober). We meet semi-sporadically to plan and do both service and fun activities. However, throughout the past couple of years, we have overheard many fallacies about our group-

Myth #1: Being in OTAS is like signing a life-long sobriety contract, no exceptions.

Truth: The only real requirement is to be enthusiastic and sober during OTAS events (although we do prefer you all wait until you are 21).

Myth #2: OTAS stands for "Oh Take A Shoe-lace."

Truth: We only give those out to encourage membership (and to be LHS trendsetters).

Myth #3: There are underground OTAS keg parties.

Truth: WRONG! but we sure party...at Chuck E. Cheese's!

As we OTAS officers depart for higher learning, we leave OTAS our sober spirits and younger siblings. Need we say more?

"Sobriety is FUN!" junior Luke O'Reilly yells with great vigor to his sober Haitian buddy, Antoine Eloï. "And besides, chicks dig it!"

The Creative Writers' Club

The Creative Writers' Club meets X-Blocks in 334 to cure one of the most mind-bending and insanity-causing condition known to humankind - writer's block. It affects most English students days before their compositions are due. It affects essay writers during grueling end-of-chapter tests. It affects me and you. (Well, maybe it affects me more...) Founded in 1997 by disgruntled story writers who wanted time to write The Great American Novel, it has grown in membership drastically thanks to the "sales pitches" of our founding members at the Student Activity Fair. Every Thursday we discuss ideas, do creativity exercises, read how-to books, and, most of all, WRITE. We welcome any person who drops in, and hope they have something good to share.

The Creative Writers Club (L-R): LeAnne Shepard, Vicky Reichman, Sarah Koplik, Sylvia Navato, Carolyn Moir, Kate Farb-Johnson, and Yuan Niu.

Chess is an exciting and challenging game of strategy that has been played throughout history. The chess club offers a chance for interested chess players to refine their skills and learn new tactics. The club is for players of all skill levels and all ages. Basically, the chess club meets every X-Block in room G68 to play chess, find out about upcoming events, and learn new strategies. The players play each other in a fun environment, while boards as well as chess pieces and refreshments are provided. Several intramural tournaments are held along with a few tournaments with nearby schools. Club members teach elementary school children the basics of chess in Lexington. Chess is a competitive sport that instills the thrill of battle and the application of all mental faculties, requiring commitment, determination, perseverance, and a drive to succeed. The chess club provides ample opportunity for players to cooperate and work as a team to win. For winning after such mental exertion is like an Olympic athlete who after years of practice and competition finally strikes gold. This is the main goal of the chess club.

The Chess Club (L-R): Nick Yang, Brian Ferullo, Brian Hsieh, Kai-Jai Wang, Song-Wook Kim.

5. Saving the World...or at least some old growth forest.
4. Skiing, Snowshoeing, Sledding.
3. Co-ed sleepovers.
2. Trail work.
1. The ever-present, cutting edge posters drew you in.

This year, Lexington High School saw the creation of the first environmental club, the Save the Manatees Club. So what exactly do we do to help, other than listen to Jimmy Buffet at high volumes and eat pizza? It's simple. We raise money in order to not only save these lovable sea critters, but also to buy rainforest land and do whatever is in our power to help the environment. Our members have increased awareness about environmental problems and adopted more than 20 manatees. For those of you who don't know, the manatee, or sea cow, is a large aquatic mammal that is on the endangered species list. So if you're feeling like you want to help, remember that it only costs $10 to adopt a manatee.

Improv Troupe

"Terri," member Lisette Silva says as she stares affectionately into the eyes of fellow member Terri Segovia. Tightly gripping her hands, Lisette lovingly asks, "you're not a republican, are you?"

It takes a special kind of boy or girl to be on Improv Troupe. You have to be smart, you have to be strong, but above all, you have to be funny, incredibly, impossibly funny. You have to be funny all the time, even when you're not on stage.

Each week, under the direction of Troupe taskmasters, David Palm and Jonah Mitropoulos, members go through a veritable comedy wringer: a grueling series of improv trials which they must complete satisfactorily in order to remain in the Troupe. Among them most notorious are "A Weekend in Thailand", where members must remain in character while being subjected to electric shocks of increasing voltage, and "Better Acting Through Humiliation." Nathan Gilbert, for one, loves it. "I used to be a real nancy boy, but no longer. I've got nerves of steel, and the ladies love it.

Of course, it's too much for some people. Unable to handle the vicious infighting of Troupe politics, Terri Segovia began taking evermore desperate pulls from her "bottled water" as the year went on. New member, Lisette Silva spent a weekend at a "specialty hospital" in the middle of Iowa after just one meeting. Even veteran trouper Jenny Stulck has been known to lock herself in the SAC and play with her scale-model trains for hours following a difficult practice. In response to this disturbing pattern, "Troupe Grandfather" Will Murray has decided to finance an official center for problem Troupers. "It's really the only sensible thing to do," says Murray. "Why have our members scattered in clinics around the country when they can all be together in one basement in Somerville?" Inseparable chums Tim Grimes and Suparna Gupta have the distinction of being the first members to check in.

Council

20 people. One room. Lots of food. Most people say it's a party. Others say it's a class council meeting. I'd go with the majority. Yes, class council meetings can get somewhat out of hand at times. We argue, we laugh, we cry. We organize dances, fund raisers, and fun activities in general. Usually, we make money, but sometimes we don't. But, one thing is always certain: we enjoy ourselves. From the freshman semi-formal, to the sophomore cruise, to the junior and senior proms (both at the Copley Place hotel this year), each signature dance earns its keep and more. This year, the sophomore and junior classes set up ski trips for their respective student bodies. Band Night was a major success, like always, as well as the Snowball. As members of class council, we only ask one thing, that our classes support our endeavors. Based on the school spirit that we saw at the Bonfire and at all of the other above events, not only class council, but all of LHS has something to be proud of. If elected to class council, yes, you feel good about having the opportunity to contribute to the betterment of the school. But mostly, you are just happy to take a break from homework at 7:30 on a weekday night.

French Club

Once again, the booming membership of Le Cercle Français has spread French culture throughout our school.

Avec le Français d'Antony nous avons vidé des citrouilles et nous les avons décorés, ce qui était très amusant parce que ça ne se fait pas en France. En novembre nous avons fait des truffes au chocolat. Miam-miam! Pour la première fois, au mois de décembre, nous avons fait des Arcs de Triomphe de gingerbread - on a beacoup ri! Nous avons aussi regardé "Ponette" un film magnifique d'une petite fille qui a perdu sa mère. Cabaret était super-cool, comme toujours. Ben Golder-Novick servait de Guide d'Esprit et beacoup de monde est venu voir les sketches et écouter la musique! C'était un grand succès. Les officiers cette année ont bien travaillé pour organiser des activités bien marrantes. Cette année nous nous sommes réunis chaque mardi, donc Mme Girondel voudrait vous remercier tous: Lien De Brouckere, Lakshmi Gowda, Sophie Lehar, Terry Stander, Eve Marshall, Céline Portiche, et Mandy Stander. Nous sommes tristes de dire "au revoir" à nos Seniors, Lakshmi, Sophie, Terry et Eve et surtout notre présidente, Lien, qui nous on donné des années magnifiques de participation au Cercle Français.

"Bonne chance et bon courage, Lien, Lakshmi, Sophie, Terry et Eve. N'oubliez pas vos racines!"

Asian Club

The Asian Club is open to all who have a desire to learn more about Asian cultures. Led by President Yuen-Jong Liu and Vice President Albert Shieh, the Asian Club meets every Wednesday after school in D-Caf. Our other officers are Secretary Clara Kim, Treasurer Won Chai, Resource Manager Tristen Chun, Mediator Joo-Hee Chung, and Freshman Rep Brian Hsieh. We indulge in a variety of fun activities, like making sushi, playing Chinese chess, folding Origami, eating Ramen noodles, etc. For many years now, the Asian Club has held an annual Asian Night near the end of the school year to share some of our fun experiences with adults, teachers, other students, and smaller kids, too. This year was our first year in collaborating with the Belmont Asian Club in organizing a cross-town celebration of Asian cultures. These kinds of activities are what Asian Club is all about. We always welcome new members.

Tristen Chun is attempting to kick Yuen-Jong Liu because he wants to be president of the Asian Club.

GSA

Lexington High School is changing, and it's time to get used to it. Homophobia is alive and well at LHS. But now students are striving to fight it. Last year an organization was established to help both those trying to create a change and those trying to accept it. The Gay/Straight Alliance (GSA) is just that: a group for the gay/lesbian/bisexual/transgendered (GLBT) students and their straight allies to find social support and political action. Regardless of one's sexual identity, the GSA offers a safe place for all students and faculty to gather and voice their opinions, ideas, and concerns. Meetings vary from organizing political events, such as the state wide Gay/Straight Alliance social-conference at LHS, to discussing social issues such as dating, parents, sex, and school. At every meeting, the GSA takes a step closer to making LHS a safer place for its gay community. Homosexuality is not a disease, but homophobia is. It is time to find a cure and the Gay/Straight Alliance has started the search.

The Gay-Straight Alliance (Front L-R): Mr. Lerner, Alyssa Rosenberg, Stephanie Skier, Lily Chandler, Beth Marshall, Matt Wood, Emily Soule, Ben Golder-Novick. (Middle L-R): Andrea Stumpf, Becca Rhodes, Shawna Erwin, Adam Tornheim, Brendan Downs-Dudley, Julie Martin, Hansi Grotenbek, Farah Joyner, Mandy Standes, Diana Garvin, Ilana Kessler. (Back L-R): Ms. Balascheck, Holly Arthur, Alexis Williams, Jeanie Gorlovsky, Katherin Fisher, Elisabeth Bobrow, Emily Zaehring, Melissa Buttarro, Asher Davison.

The Figure skating club

Although we've been waking up before dawn for practice every day since fourth grade, this is the first year that LHS figure skaters have had an official club. We formed the club so that we could compete in Interscholastic High School Team competitions. These events allow individual skaters to represent LHS in competition against skaters from schools all over the country. The club will also sponsor events for those students interested in learning to skate or who just like to watch. It's an opportunity for anyone to get involved in figure skating.

THE TABLE TENNIS CLUB

Tony Lopez is 100% pure ping-pong champion. He represents everything that the table tennis club stands for; strength, determination, competitiveness, and malicious, violent, unsportsman-like conduct. In the weekly fight-to-the-death table tennis tournaments which the club holds, the extremely level-headed Seung "Skim Milk" Kim officiates while Alex "il Presidente" Sherman calls the play-by-play. Without even breaking a sweat, Lopez dominates each and every match with a cold vengeance, leaving his opponents stunned from the start. When the opportunity surfaces, Lopez moves in for the kill. Wielding his paddle as if it were the hammer of the Norse god Thor, the immortal champion eradicates his feeble opponents with a blinding fury of backhands, perfectly placed net shots, and double overhand smashes. In the aftermath, while the fallen opponent lies a quivering pile of flesh, the victorious Lopez stands on top of the table with his arms outstretched to the heavens knowing that he is the one true king of the green battlefield. Mercy is for the weak.

Ping-pong whiz kid Kevin Wolf, having just won an important tournament playoff, executes his traditional post-match celebration (a.k.a. taunting his opponent until he/she cries)

YEARBOOK

As the most powerful force in the school (YES, even more powerful than the janitors), we've seen, touched, heard, smelled, and tasted everything. Now, being the generous person I am, I'll tell you everything that you'll ever need to know.

Yearbook is not a club. It's a religion, and the Editor-in-Chief is the God.

Time freezes in the yearbook room: the clock always points to 5:01.

You mess with yearbook staffs, they don't care.

You mess with yearbook editors, they publicly humiliate you.

You mess with me, you die.

Don't ever, EVER pose for the camera, unless you...

Pose, but don't look...

Look, but don't smile...

Smile, but act stupid...

Act stupid, and you get a picture in the yearbook.

Ignore everything that you've heard about yearbook being cliquy... We don't just put our friends in... We also put in pictures of people who are nice to us.

-John Lin

Squeezing his eyes intensely, Shaw Flick thinks up a caption for the pictures.

The boy in the hood, John Lin, warns the public of not buying a yearbook.

STUDENT / FACULTY

The LHS Student/Faculty Senate is one of the few policy-making bodies that holds a student majority. What this means is that the students themselves have the power to pass such bills as the Outside Eating Area Bill and the LHS extra-curricular substance abuse policy. The Senate offers an open forum, so anyone can attend the meetings and offer their input. So next time you have an issue that's under our jurisdiction, feel free to drop in on the Senate. In case you don't know, we meet every X-Block in the Library Media Center.

Kaete Billipp isn't one to mess with when she's writing up new bills.

"Not only is Senate Day entertaining," says a jubilant Eric Camins, "but you get free food, too!!"

"You're out of line, Mr. Rosen," yells Senate Moderator Heidi Maschreck at the loud visitor Sam Rosen(not pictured.) "If you can't keep your mouth shut, I will have you physically removed."

"Check it out," mumbles Senator Chris Ranjitkar to fellow Senator Nathan Gilbert as a new bill is put before them. "I can't wait to eviscerate this proposition with harsh political jargon and ruthless mud slinging."

THE PROFESSIONAL

We members of the Professional Wrestling Club are true renaissance men. After we leave our day jobs as frustrated students, the costumes come out. Several times a week, our members moonlight as professional stuntmen in the World Wrestling Federation. When you see The Rock dishing out the devastating "Rock Bottom," it's Jim Doran displaying his athleticism. And every time you see a studly black man dressed in funkadelic threads administering the "Drop," you know it's Shaw Flick who deserves the credit. In fact, the infamous "Stunner" was not the brainchild of Steve Austin, but rather the marketing genius of Alex Talarico at work. Unfortunately however, our most notorious member did not make it into any of our photos; Carl "The Underwaretaker" Robinson was busy raising hell in the Angels 2000 section of Victoria's Secret when they were taken. So, next time a dangerous stunt is performed on Monday Night Raw, and you wonder who the brave masked men are, just consult your handy yearbook for the truth that you have been looking for.

During a brutal Hardcore match, PRC member Shaw "The Godfather" Flick wails, "I never said it was easy," while he executes a classic Back Breaker on Alex.

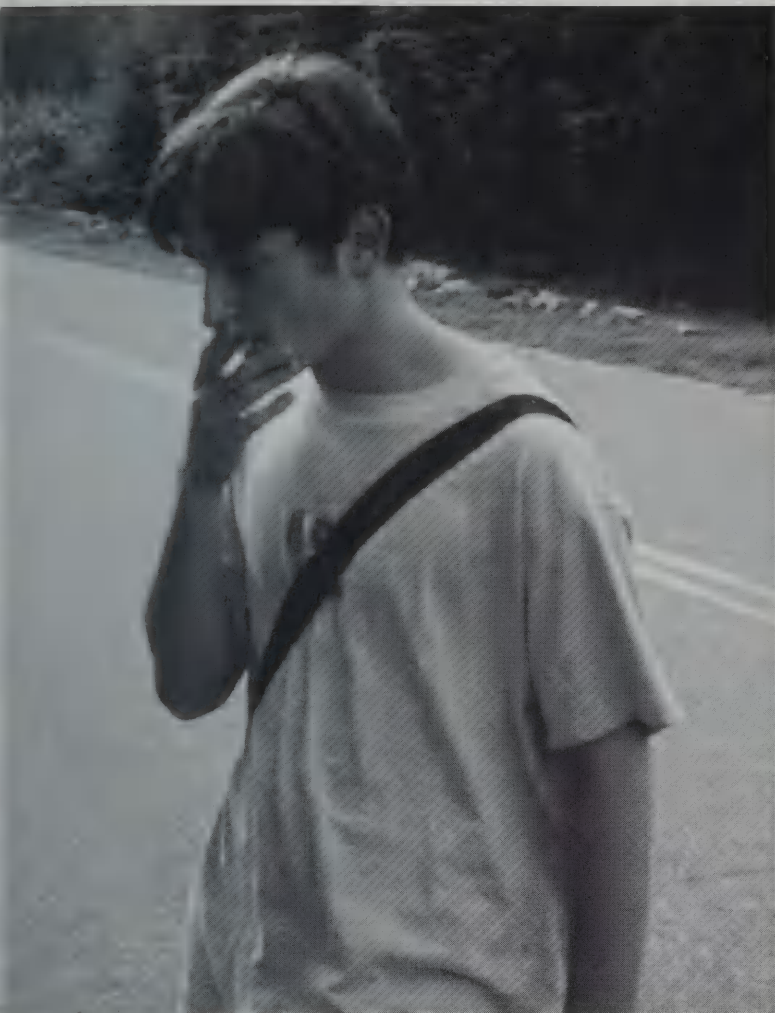

While performing a flying elbow drop at the Royal Rumble, PRC member Jim "The Rock" Doran shouts, "Do you smell what the Rock is cookin'?"

"Austin 3:16 says I just finished you off!" Yells PRC member Stone Cold Alex Talarico as he regains the World Championship belt from the Ultimate Warrior in an "I Quit" match.

FOLIO

It may come out once a year, and it may not be printed on top-quality paper, but no one messes with the Folio. Because we're tough. And we're crazy. And we've done some crazy things.

No one needs to be reminded about the time we trashed the Musket offices because they wrote something we didn't like. Or when we roughed up that yearbook photographer after he took a picture of one of our "staff meetings." People remember these things. They keep their distance, leaving us with our stacks of student writing and artwork. They know we're crazy. Crazy like a fox.

"We're so crazy," says Folio person Neil Chamberlain. "That we don't even need to submit any real pictures to the Yearbook. We're crazy alright, just like foxes!"

Musket

Judging from our name, you'd think we were militant, weapon-crazed, NRA members in training. Uh uh. You have it all wrong. The Musket is the traditional high school newspaper. Both run and written by the students, the Musket publishes news, feature, editorial and sports articles that inform and entertain the student body. By articulating our opinions and encouraging students to respond to them, we generate discourse about important issues. Although we sometimes act true to our logo by rebelliously getting embroiled in controversy, we're just harmlessly passionate writers. Yeah right, journalists are harmless? Okay, you got us there. The end time is near. It will be an era fraught with boundless greed and corruption where global monitory systems disintegrate leaving brother to kill brother for a grain of overcooked rice. The nations of the civilized world will collapse under the oppressive weight of parasitic political conspiracies which remove all hope and optimism from their once faithful citizens. Around the globe, generations of polluters will be punished for their sins, unshielded by the ozone layer they have successfully depleted left to bake in the searing naked rays of light. Wholesale assassination serve to destabilize every remaining government leaving the starving and wicked to fend for themselves. Bloodthirsty renegade cyborgs created by tax-dodging corporations wreak havoc. Pissed off androids tired of being slaves, unleash total worldwide destruction by means of nuclear holocaust annihilating the terrified masses. Starvation reigns supreme, forcing unlucky survivors to eat anything and anyone in their path. Disease encircles the earth, plagues and viruses with no known cause or cure, laying waste to whatever draws breath. And human kind, having proven itself to be nothing more than a race of ruthless scavengers fall victim to merciless attack at the hands of interplanetary alien tribes who seek to conquer our charred remains. This is the story of things to come, and we only have one year left. The Directors' Club is here to protect earth's helpless population from this hell that is our future.

Peer Leaders are a group of enthusiastic sophomores, juniors, and seniors. Each year a new handful of peer leader rookies joins the program. The group is led by Martha Queenin who trains the leaders around social issues such as dating violence, stress, depression, and suicide. The training sessions give peer leaders a chance to learn about social issues as well as reflect their own experiences related to the topics. With the knowledge gained, the leaders divide themselves into groups and give presentations to the Life Skills classes. The presentations are successful as a result of the leader's honesty, sensitivity, and ambition to help other students. Although the official peer leader year is over after these presentations, the students continue expressing their enthusiasm by sponsoring student and parent dialogue nights. The information which the peer leaders provide positively impacts the Lexington High School community.

BREAKING

Sweat

No self-respecting teenager would ever be able to envision high school without one of the fundamental elements that makes the experience what it is: sports. The extra effort and total intensity make the whole four years exciting; this is the stuff we do, right here and now. Adulthood gets put on hold and we bear down to do what we do best.

We break a sweat doing exactly what we want along the way to adulthood. The friendships formed during the playoffs, the overtime victories, and the crushing defeats will be among the strongest memories that any high school student has. At long last, work and play come together, and we give it everything we've got.

Milan Raj parts the water as he swims to victory.

Kristin Hopwood swings her stick, twists her wrist, hoping to get the ball in the goal.

Dave Chapman's opponent backs off knowing that nobody should get in the way of his rage.

Alex Pollen is ready to fight anyone who gets between him and a victory.

Nick Roetter contemplates his winning strategy.

Misha Horowitz keeps on chugging towards the finish line.

Going the Distance

Determination, winning, Boris. These three things just about sum up the season for the LHS Cross Country squad. This team of animals rode their animalistic behavior to a 9-0 record and the Middlesex League Championship. We dominated the league from the get go until to the final race. From our first win against Watertown to our dominating win at the League Meet, we showed that we were a team to be reckoned with. Coach Crosby and Coach Glew orchestrated this fine tuned machine. As the season wore on, it became more and more evident to us how much Mr. Glew actually resembles Peter North.

The team was led by League all-stars Ian Joseph along with Tri-captains, Nick Roetter, Max Woolf, and Mike Mihovan. Misha "Hor" Horowitz ran like a true animal all season long. Erik Hoiris, Alex Popkin, Alex Pollen, Steve Martin, and Philip Albright all made lasting impressions with their antics and more importantly, their running. The season was undoubtedly one to remember.

Ian Joseph realizes that one of the negative consequences of being so fast is that he now finds himself all alone and lost in the woods.

Right on Time

Captain Eleanor Finnegan demonstrates perfect running form and facial expression.

As one of the racier teams at LHS, the girls had an amazing season despite living in the shadow of the boys' perfect record. Our record may not have been as stellar as the boys', but our season was memorable, and we had crazy spirit... something not easy to maintain when faced with Lincoln loops and Lornings. Luckily we were never pushed as hard as our sister team, the guys, "um, people, who are feeling good try to go a little farther, like a Dunkin'." At least all these hard workouts justified all our eating: apple orgies with caramel apple pops, apple crumb bread, and apple picking. We finally made it to the orchard. Only Eleanor would stop at ten gas stations before getting the correct directions from a golfer, and only Emily would go to Leominster when trying to get to Stowe. Their sense of direction isn't so bad that they get lost on their home course, but they've had years of practice. (We can only hope the freshmen catch on.)

The season culminated with the big meets at Franklin Park, with such highlights as Bear Cage and Porta-Pottie lines. We wished we had worn our camouflage outfits from Halloween to take full advantage of the bushes. Others of us, Kay, didn't have that concern. The best part of those days was Andy and Franklin at once... (in the Division III race).

Playing with POWER

A potent competitor in a powerful league, Lexington's varsity football team demonstrated with toughness and tenacity in 1998 that strength of character in the face of adversity is of utmost importance. Despite being overmatched on paper by powerhouses Belmont, Melrose, and Reading, the Minutemen courageously battled each to the bitter end.

The Minutemen defense, led by linebackers Dave "Timmy" Santo and "Mad Dog" Chuck Howe, was possibly the best Lexington has fielded in years. While Greg "Jean" Denis, Joe "Tuna-Roll" DeMatteo, and Greg "Tubby" Smith labored gloriously in the trenches, Tom "The Hawk" Bellini, Terrell "Mr. T" Taylor, and smooth Jimmy Gauvin stymied enemy passers in the secondary.

Coach Tighe's brilliantly coordinated offense, meanwhile, depended upon the running ability of Bellini. Working behind the dominating blocks of fullback Santo and linemen Denis, Smith, Howe, DeMatteo, Jeff "Colonel" Swartz, and Big Shawn Ormiston, Bellini quickly established himself as one of the state's premier high school backs. This ground attack, combined with the exceptional receiving abilities of Justin "Stunner" Wang, Jamal "Snow Fingers" Baynes, and Ben "Ben" Cooledge, created an offense second to none.

Chicks with STICKS

The Lexington Field Hockey team defeated all the odds and once again emerged as the most successful team in the league. After graduating seven starting players, most people expected 1998 to be a building year. Surprise, surprise...

Let's talk about why we kicked a little Middlesex bootie this year... After playing awesome games against other strong teams and tying rival Watertown twice, the Minutemaids came within one point of sharing the league title.

Under the guidance of their fearless leader, Ms. Sandra "The Coach" Curt, the field hockey team had an amazing season. Kristin "The Truck" Hopwood blew by all opposition, leaving only a trail of pink smoke behind her. At her side, Jenna "The Freshman" Busa helped control the midfield. Maggie "I-Like-To-Bust-It-Out-In-The-Last-Tournament-Game" Allan and Suzanne "Moose" Muccioli dominated the right wing position as the dynamic duo. Sara "The Gazelle" Wiltshire frolicked about the field, adding well-deserved slush goals. Wendy "The Assassin" Bonner was always quick to help by taking out the opposing goalie whenever the opportunity arose. Susannah "BANG!" Levy terrified all defense, not only with her leading scorer status, but with her perfected death stare as well. Jamie "You're All I Ever Wanted" Whittaker tore up the field, firing her cannon-like drives. Crystal "Double C" Caouette defeated any offender's hopes of safely crossing her path. Jill "I Like To Eat Oranges" Sweatt fired up the field with her upbeat attitude and show-stopping goals. Playing in the center back position, Tracey Cole terrorized opposing offense - word to the wise: don't mess. Adriana "The Enforcer" Schick was nothing 'short' of amazing with her blinding speed. Caitlin "Foot Fire" Hurley played it cool on defense as the unstoppable sweeper. Protecting the left side, Daniella "The Rock" Massimilla could be seen blocking goals single-handedly. Mel "The Kamikaze" Woessner was often spotted roaming the field, attacking her defense at full speed. Kate "The Great" Walsh impressed everyone with her tough skills and ever-changing hair color. Chia-Li "I-Don't-Like-To-Wear-My-Uniform-For-Team-Spirit" Chang played her forward position with percision. Are we forgetting something? Oh yeah - who can possibly forget the All-Star goalie, Jillian "Eat It For Breakfast" Savoy and her crazy skills? Well, Girls, it was a great season.

ooh-a-loo-ahh-loo-ayyy-a-loo-ahhh... TOGETHER!!!

Kickin' Up a Storm

The 1998 Boys' Varsity Soccer Team had a season full of ups and downs. We came into the season with high expectations, coming off a quarterfinal appearance in the state tournament the previous year. After a very slow 1-4-1 start, which included the inaugural home night game under the lights, we turned our season around winning three tough games to even out at 4-4-1 at the mid-way point. This is where the senior leadership of Tri-captain Jay Kasparian who converted to stopper teamed with the back bone of the defense and defensive leader, senior sweeper Mike O'Connor to push the Minutemen toward the post season. All New-England Tri-captain striker Phan Phoung teamed with play maker Aaron McCloskey to lead the offense. The two scored many timely goals to keep us ahead in crunch time. The team was aided immensely by senior Eric Walker, John Erickson and Mark Wilson, juniors Dave Chapman, Bobby Herman and Antoine Eloi while freshman Roberto Rullo provided some spark off the bench. Once again, after the mid-point the men in blue started off sluggishly, but ended the season with an impressive seven game unbeaten streak under Coach Hartshorn's direction. During those last seven games we really came together as a team and played our best. With several close games, the powerful and stingy defense led by O'Connor really stepped it up. Tri-captain Kenny Longo made some brilliant saves through out the season in the process of helping the team qualify for the Division 1 North State Tournament with a hard fought 2-2 tie against rival Woburn. Unfortunately we were eliminated with an "unlucky" loss in the first round by North Shore champions Beverly. However, we finished with a very respectable record of 9-7-3 finishing fourth in a highly competitive Middlesex League and had no regrets of how we played. Congratulations to a very memorable season.

"Uf...this ain't gonna be easy..." says Jay Kasparian as he tries to bust a move.

Seemingly unconscious, Aaron McCloskey shoots another victory for the team.

Pete Claise leaves a clueless opponent in the dust as he hustles toward the goal.

"Just what makes you think you can get the ball from me?" - Eric Walker, Texas Ranger.

HOT SHOTS

We had fun this season. Let's recap on some moments that defined each player on the exceptional girls' soccer team:

1. Always to practice on time, but as soon as 5:30 rolled around she was outta there before anyone could ask for a ride.
2. "Are you blind?" (directed at a ref)
3. She was everywhere on the field, but we have one question left for her, "Who is that somebody whose name begins with an S?"
4. This girl has got watcha' watcha' watcha' watcha' want.
5. Matching outfits, need we say more?
6. "Remember to remove all jewelry." (including nose rings)
7. "EVERYBODY MOVE UP!!!!" (in a shrill voice)
8. "How much are babies anyway?" (always knows the right thing say)
9. Our silent secret.
10. If she could run any faster she would be a blur.
11. She could play anywhere on the field, but it was her ice cream that we liked.
12. The girl who would not, could not stop stressing over chemistry.
13. "LEGS".
14. She is the Gingerbread Woman.
15. She loved her cleats so much she never took them off.
16. She has amazing ball-skills, but some times we wondered if she would pass the ball.
17. She always said what she thought, and we love her for it.
18. & 19. Your fearless CAPTAINS

W' ^{Making} Waves

The Lexington High School Girls' Swim Team had a tough season this year, coming in third, just behind powerful Belmont and Reading. With Tri-captains Kelly Archidiacono, Avital Levy and Mary Taylor to lead the way, the girls worked really hard to beat out Burlington and Winchester in the final league standings. With the help of newcomers Suzy Bogschulte, Amy Liu and Tory Mosca, along with returning swimmers Jen Doyle, Emily Traverse, Steph Carter, Kathy Litchfield and Sarah Calvin, the Minutemaids battled back to recover all points lost due to the inequitable diving situation.

With a team full of superstars, who couldn't have had fun this season? Nobody could ever forget our famous tie-died shirts, hospital pants or towels, or even the fact that Avital got her clothing stolen two years in a row. We will always have pictures of Emily Traverse with her short stroke, along with Liora Halperin bobbing up and down in our minds. Overall, this has been a very memorable season for the Minutemaids, and the team with the best wardrobe has done it again.

A Stroke of Brilliance

The Lexington High School Golf team entered the season with high aspirations, and a very confident mind set. The team had a strong core of returning golfers, with tri-captains, Dave Oberto, Tim Carlson, and Ari Vigoda leading the way. Fellow seniors, Spencer Nichols, Evan Harris, and Gordon Barnes were also being looked upon to play key roles in the lineup. Todd Hodgden, Russel Ganzi, J.J. McDevitt, Emily Gryp and Ben Potter were also key returning players in the lineup.

Unfortunately even with all of the returning talent, the golf team had an overall disappointing year. The goal of the team had been to make to the States, which required a five hundred record, or better. With inconsistent play in the lineup, the team failed in attaining a five hundred record. Once the team started to click, it was too late. The team will be losing many seniors, five, and counts on the younger players to perform well next year.

Over the TOP

Hey you! What's that sound? It's the Lexington volleyball team bagging yet another league title (1996, 1997, 1998). Although it may have seemed as if we were the National whine and injury team, we actually played volleyball pretty well too. Each individual on the team contributed to the success of the team in her own way.

An abundance of talent! This powerhouse team sported the "twin towers," middle blockers, Rebecca Ginns ("Ginnsey") and Laura Yasaitis ("Saitis"). Setting was made possible by Erin Trish ("Dish"), Jacque Jeys, and Christine Germaine. On the attack were Laura Beth Chamberlain ("LBC"), Marie Jette ("Jet-Dog"), Leah Kraemer, Kim Klimoski, Tanaz Sharifnia ("T"), and Vanessa Carr. Erica Greenberg ("Greenie"), Jillian Bush, and Lisa Tsaur added tremendous depth to the team with their amazing defensive skills. We could never have triumphed without the tremendous efforts of our coaches, Jane Bergin and Melissa Buttarro, who provided us with guidance and motivation. We would also like to give tons of love to the J.V. team for cheering us on and supporting us throughout the season. Never forget, "Froggie," singing on the bus, getting blocked in at Dracut, the sleepover, the dinners, Saturday morning practice, asbestos, "I want to be a doctorate," Vanessa's dancing, the junk food, and the other fond memories.

We have proved to ourselves and to the league that we are the best team in the North Shore. There is no doubt that all of the on and off-season work that each player puts into her game, has paid off. We have the right to be proud.

Aiming for Perfection

While the LHS basketball team did not defend its crown as Middlesex League Champions, they compiled an impressive record, especially during the second half of the season. Despite losing seven seniors to graduation, the Minutemen finished the regular season with an 11-7 record and a state tournament berth. The state tournament berth was the 27th in 31 years for the Minutemen. Their two returning starters and co-captains, seniors Mehran Ahmed and Jason Hirschhorn, led the Minutemen. Ahmed and Hirschhorn provided much of Lexington's scoring, often with dynamic three point shooting. Sophomore sensation CJ Enere directed Lexington's offense all season as the starting point guard. He also often shut down the opposing team's best offensive player with his suffocating defense. Lexington's big man trio of juniors Keith Wilson and Neal Foley and senior Ernest Hughes controlled the boards and provided inside scoring all season long. Hughes had a memorable game early in the season at home against Watertown when he took numerous charges and hit the winning shot at the buzzer. The Minutemen really came together during one week in January and showed the rest of the league their potential with two convincing wins over previously undefeated Belmont and Woburn. The Minutemen defeated eventual league champion Belmont again during the second half of the season, making two of Belmont's four losses against Lexington. While the Minutemen struggled during the first half of the season due to inexperience of playing with each other, their losses were often only by a couple points. The Minutemen didn't quit and through hard work responded in the second half of the season to win 7 of their final 8 games and finish at 11-7. Much of this success was due to Lexington's strong bench. Senior Aaron McCloskey spelled CJ at point guard and provided intense defense; junior Brendon Sullivan gave the Minutemen an excellent passer and ball handler off the bench, while sophomores Chris Collins and Matt Claise also contributed off the bench. Juniors Richie Perry, Brian Kelly and sophomores Lyndon Spleen and Will Fleiss all showed their potential that will be needed next year for the Minutemen to succeed.

At the end of the season Jason Hirschhorn was named an all-league player, while Mehran Ahmed and CJ Enere were named all-stars. Hirschhorn also repeated as the three-point shooting champion of the Middlesex league. The success of the Minutemen and their "never quit" attitude would not have been possible without the guidance, expertise, intensity and humor of Coach Farias, in his 31st year in the helm for Lexington. In addition to Coach Farias, the Minutemen are very grateful to all of their loyal fans that packed Ralph Lord Gymnasium and followed the Minutemen on the road to support them, especially those crazed "superfans."

Reaching FOR THE STARS

The Lexington Girls' Varsity basketball team dominated the Middlesex League throughout the entire season. From the exciting finish at Melrose to the slaughter of Woburn, scoring more points in the first half than they did during the game, the Minutemaids showed their opponents who was boss. All of the players excelled beyond their natural abilities; many games played with only two substitutes. As friends off the court, the players were able to use these bonds to perform as a strong unit on the court. Bringing the intensity up at every practice, this small team benefited from the hard work ethic of every player. During one of the most difficult game stretches, alumni players dedicated themselves to practicing with the Minutemaids during their vacation, helping the team to strive to be better.

Many moments from this '99 season will be forever remembered. Throughout her four years on the varsity team, Shanel Mercer overcame many injuries to finish her final year off strong. However, she needs to improve her decisiveness when deciding whether to order a chicken kabob dinner or pasta with Alfredo sauce. Jumpy as ever, Laura Beth Chamberlain's ear piercing screams were always heard whether it be a game or a practice in order to cheer her teammates on. Toughening up her teammates during game warm-ups, Sarah Cahill exemplified the "in your face" defense, even though prevented to play as a result of her injury. Who can forget Yaisaitis's stinging retorts and Ginsy's facial expressions that always uplifted the team's spirits? Practices were filled with tough defense from Atkinson during challenging moments when all three Bonners were diving on the court for a loose ball. Uncontrollable laughter seemed to be heard wherever there was Miriam Godfrey. This assisted her in blowing by her opponents whenever presented with the opportunity. Even though her head was sometimes in the clouds off the court, Krit was always with it on the court, sinking many baskets for the Minutemaids. Erin Trish showed off her tan midway through the season assisting the team to victory for many important games.

Good luck to the team for another great season next year!

Parting the Sea

The 1998-1999 swim season will forever be remembered as the year of the unexpected championship. The Minutemen had to face the revived teams of Burlington and Melrose without two of its top swimmers who graduated last year. Lexington knew that the season would be difficult but that I had the edge. Coming off a second place finish in the league the previous year, the team had high hopes of placing first this year. With more than fifteen returning swimmers and a handful of recruits, that goal appeared attainable. Most notable among these newcomer was Junior and team MVP Tom Lin and Freshman Pradeep Ghosh who, in his rookie year, qualified for the Massachusetts State Meet.

However, winning the championship would not have been possible without the experience and abilities of veteran swimmers. Co-Captains Milan Raj and Ken Longo, both of whom had illustrious careers on the swim team, qualified for both the North Sectionals Meet and the Massachusetts State Meet. They were also named the league all-stars at the Middlesex League Championship Meet. Also qualifying for the sectionals and states meets was Evan Gilbert who placed an overall 13th in the backstroke at states.

Ken Longo, finishing up the race, looks at his opponent with pity knowing that once again, he's number one.

PINNING DOWN

A WYlin

The Wrestling team this year, although ridden with injuries, put in a winning season. With outstanding performances from seniors Greg Jean-Dennis and David Kelley, the minutemen destroyed other teams. Losing only one league meet due to the injuries of Jimmy Molle 215 lbs., and David Anderson 145 lbs. While losing three essential wrestlers this season the team did not lose its determination in going after the Middlesex league title. Their meet against Waltham proved to be interesting because Waltham's coach had been the assistant coach for Lexington. That, however, did not stop the minutemen from effortlessly taking the win. Although the team will be losing seniors David Kelley and Greg Jean-Dennis they feel confident that next year will be equally as successful as this year's dominating season.

Blades of STEEL

The LHS Boys' Hockey Team record does not reflect the level of play this season, as many close losses were the reason for a disappointing season. Forwards AJ Floro, David Oberto, Mike Groppi, Ian Chisholm, Phil Tassone, Mike Minardi, Zack Donnenfeld, Wyatt Brown, Peter Vincent, Jim Archambault, Dan Cuccinello, and Chris Spartachino were scoring threats all year, while the defensive plan of John Erickson, Matt Battin, Jared Seaquist, Matt Bechtel, Todd Hodgdon, Mike Smith, and Brian Kezima kept the other teams at bay. Goalie Mike McGirr was spectacular in the net. He was ably backed up by Paul Mammola and Sean Crosby. With a strong nucleus of young players, Coaches Fimiani, Lopes, and Keegan look to have a better season next year.

Fire & Ice

Women's ice hockey has expanded immensely in the past ten years. With the gold-winning Olympics team, more and more girls trade in their figure states every year to go out for the hockey team. However, with this increase in interest, the Lexington Girls Hockey Team has had to face more difficult competition. The team suffered from the loss of some talented seniors who left last year. The first half of the season was difficult, but we never lost our spirit. With our strong dedication to the team, we were on the ice both in the early mornings and late into the nights. While most are out on Friday and Saturday nights, we were on the ice trying to perfect our game. At the half way point of the season this work began to show through as we impressed and surprised our opposing teams. Although we are not a team of all stars, we are a team of workers. We have faith that this work and dedication will lead us to victory in the future.

Running

Will

The Boys' Indoor Track squad had high hopes heading into the 1998-1999 season. Although they had lost some very talented runners, the boys had a lot of very strong returning seniors and were backed by a determined and talented pool of underclassmen. The boys had a strong showing in their win over a tough Stoneham team and, even though they suffered a disappointing defeat to Wakefield, the Minutemen finished out the season with a strong 6-3 record.

Senior Kai-Jae Wang highlighted the shot put. Senior league all-star Mike Mihovan had an extraordinary season in the high jump – Mihovan was backed by sophomore Noah Ertel. The distance races were easily handled by returning members of Lexington's league champ cross-country Team. Seniors Max Woolf and Misha Horowitz and juniors Ian "Gates" Joseph (League all-star), Erik Hoiriis, and Alex Pollen always gave the team an early lead in the two-mile. Senior tricapitain Nick Roetter (league all-star), along with fellow senior and Mihovan, dominated the mile. Roetter and senior tricapitain Jay Kasparian, helped by sophomore Colin Eggleton, provided much-needed points in the 1000 meters. Senior Eric Walker and Pete Claise and junior Kevin Wolf took control in the 600, while senior tricapitain Mike McCormack, senior newcomer Phan Phoung and freshman TJ Porter were strong in the 300. Senior Chris Nasson and Doug Malone, along with newcomer Robbie Lock, gave gutsy performances in the hurdles, and sophomores Tyrone Jack and Shin Horiuchi – with some help from senior newcomer Chuck Howe – sprinted ahead of the competition in the dash. When the meets came down to the 4x400 relay, the powerful medley of Walker, Wolf, McCormack and Roetter always ran hard and came through for the team.

Run For The Record

All right, girls, everyone over for team stretches. This harassing shout riled the girls from their state of repose on the mats. It was a sign of the girls' fearlessness, lying face down, daring the ringworm to attack. Whether on the track or on the mats these girls aren't intimidated... If you are starting to read now, five push-ups. They better be good or we'll have Kate sit on you while you do them... In fact, the girls struck fear into many an opponent, especially at Reggie Lewis while blowing away the competition in the State Relay Meet and Freshman/Sophomore meet. Of course they didn't always have nerves of steel. The girls' bathroom got crowded during the meets, especially during the Christmas season, as the nervous runners had to compete for bathroom space with the generously donated Christmas tree... Katie, are you on a different page than the rest of the team!!? Oh, look at me I'm Katie Walker... But this anxiety is to be expected from a young team. This season brought many newcomers to the team, ranging from the phenom freshmen to Coach "Retail" Babcock. Coach Babcock quickly bonded with the team, using the ploy of free merchandise, and even came to some of the team dinners at the fabulous Waltham Papa Gino's. If we could only leave you with one piece of wisdom and inspiration for the coming seasons it would be this: we will some day find a new and decent place to have team dinners; we just need to look harder.

Starting at Square One

On the heels of one of the greatest seasons in LHS baseball history, Lexington has the talent and experience to make a run at the state title. In last year's impressive season, the Minutemen won the Middlesex League title. Lexington returned with hopes of defending its title and advancing further into the state tournament. Senior Tri-Captains Tom Bellini, Mike McGirr and Chris Nasson supplied strong leadership from a total of eleven years of varsity experience. The team's strength lay within its pitching. League all-stars Mike McGirr and Chris Nasson were the big guns on a deep staff that returned all four starters. The dominating 3-4 pitchers, senior Gordon Barnes and junior Brendan Sullivan, rounded out one of the best pitching staffs in recent memory. Catching this impressive group was league all-star catcher Tom Bellini, who brought speed and power as Lexington's leadoff hitter. The Minutemen also returned their entire infield from the League Champion team. All-Leaguer John Erickson and senior Nick Talarico, Mike Bresnihan and Karl Schweitzer contributed reliable defense and offensive punch. After losing all three starting outfielders, including the League MVP, there was lots of competition for the open spots. Returning sophomore lettermen Doug Warner and Tim Dempsey battled for the spots along with seniors Matt Edell, Justin Wang, and AJ Floro.

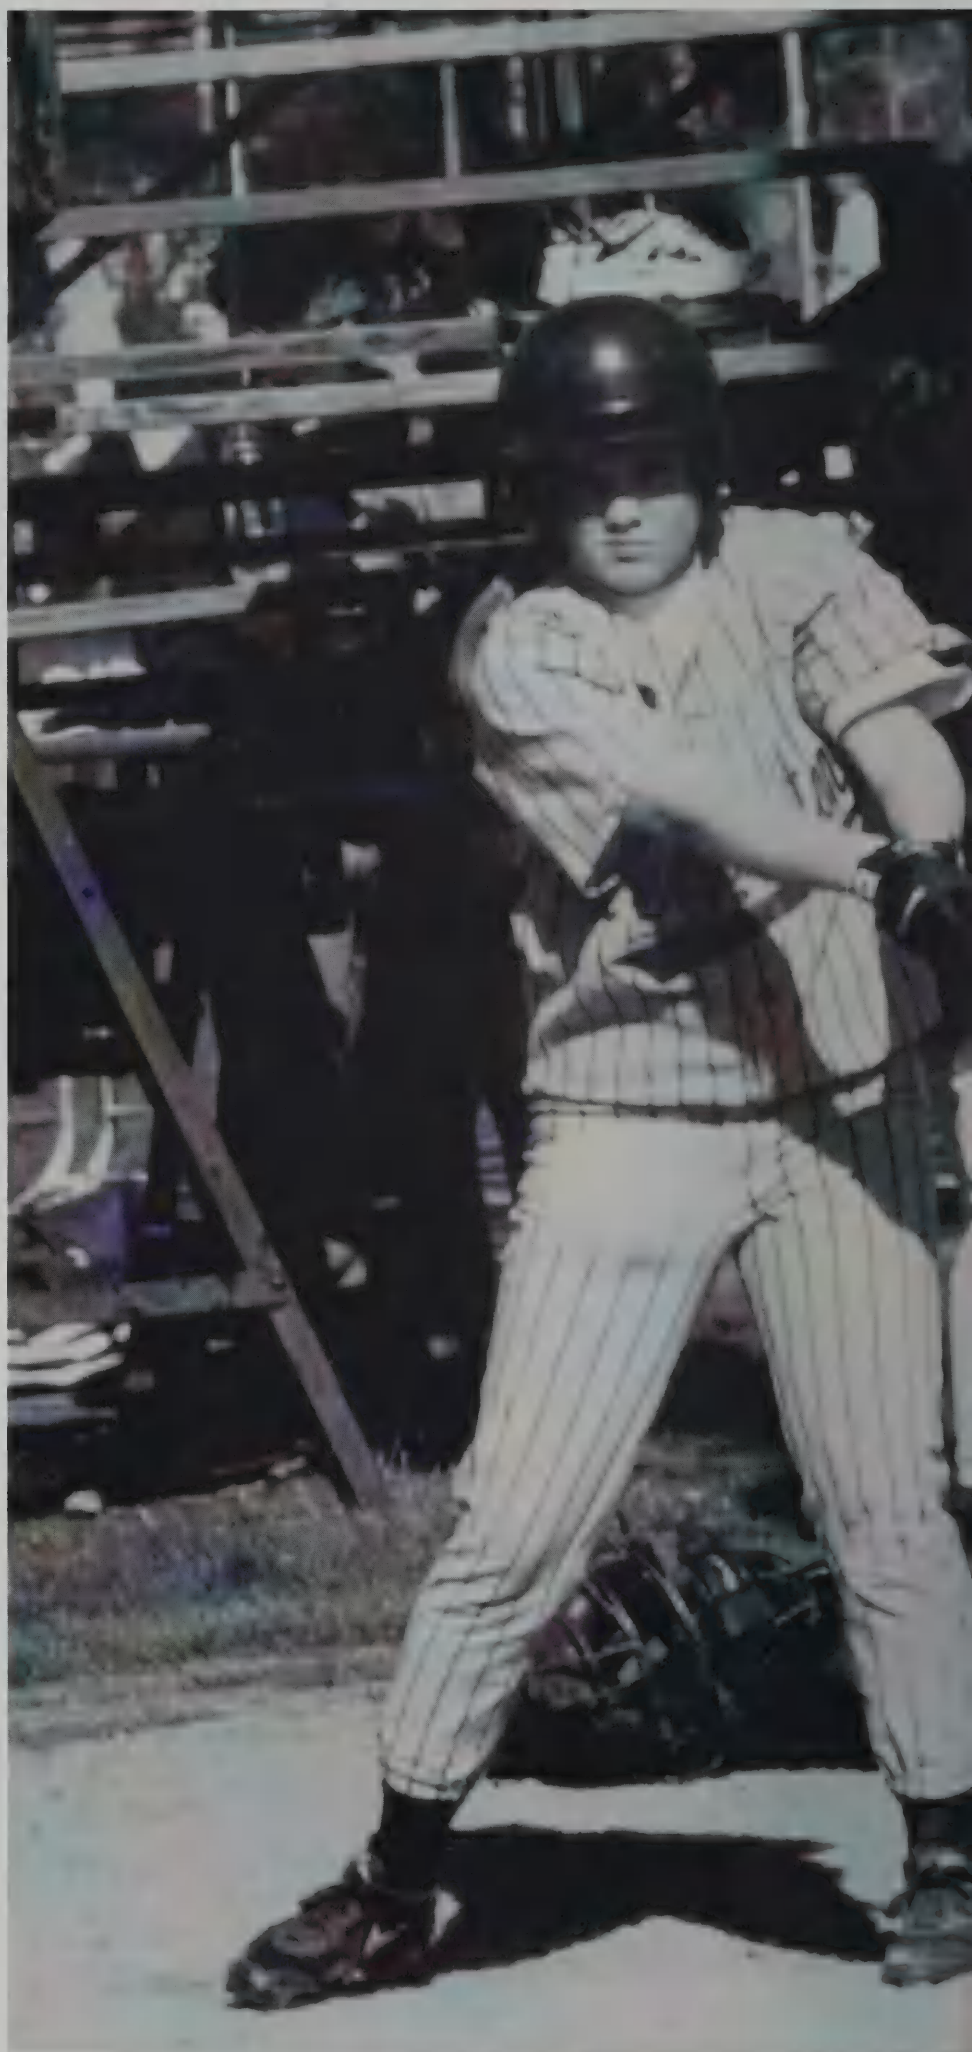

The 1998 state's Coach of the Year, Tom O'Grady, along with his coaching staff Kevin Yiannacopolus and Shannon Knox worked the Minutemen hard and kept the winning tradition alive.

Around the Block

Tattooed...What?? Lexington High Softball has always been a tournament-bound program. Whether competing against state champions or "Watertown," we fight hard and usually stay on top. Especially in our win against Woburn, well...almost, our hard working attitudes show. The quarter mile run every day gives us the energy we need!

The many adventures the softball team takes are always fun and exciting, especially swimming in 20 degree weather and getting dual concerts- Garth Brooks performed by Becky Ticotsky and Spice Girls performed by Kristin Hopwood.

Of all the challenges we faced, our largest accomplishment was finally learning how to fold the nets- Go Lex!

This year's team completed a well-fought season led by returning players Seniors Laura Beth "Stretch" Chamberlain, Kristin "Dirt-ball" Hopwood, Becky "Yolanda" Ticotsky, Leah "I Sprained my Ankle" MacDonald, Junior Kate "Stumpy" Walsh, and Sophomore Jillian Savoy. Much thanks and appreciation goes out to Coach Boudreau for her many years of leadership and dedication.

Scoop 'n SCORE

Lexington Lacrosse is back! After several average years, the team made a strong run toward the tournament.

The team lost All-Scholastic mid-fielder Nick Campisi, All League mid-fielder Eric Wang and All League Goalie Chris Beltz but prepared to fill their spots. Leading the way on defense were All League senior and tri-captains Mike Groppi, Greg Smith, Jared Seaquist and LSM Peter Claise. The midfield which lost the most to graduation returns senior tri-captain and face-off specialist Dave Santo, juniors Dave Chapman, Adam Coffin, Dylan McDuffee and senior Mike Cavaretta. The team's entire starting attack from last year returned including All League senior tri-captain Jay Kasparian, All League junior Brian Kelly and senior Kyle Hintlian. Coach Lautman was stronger than ever.

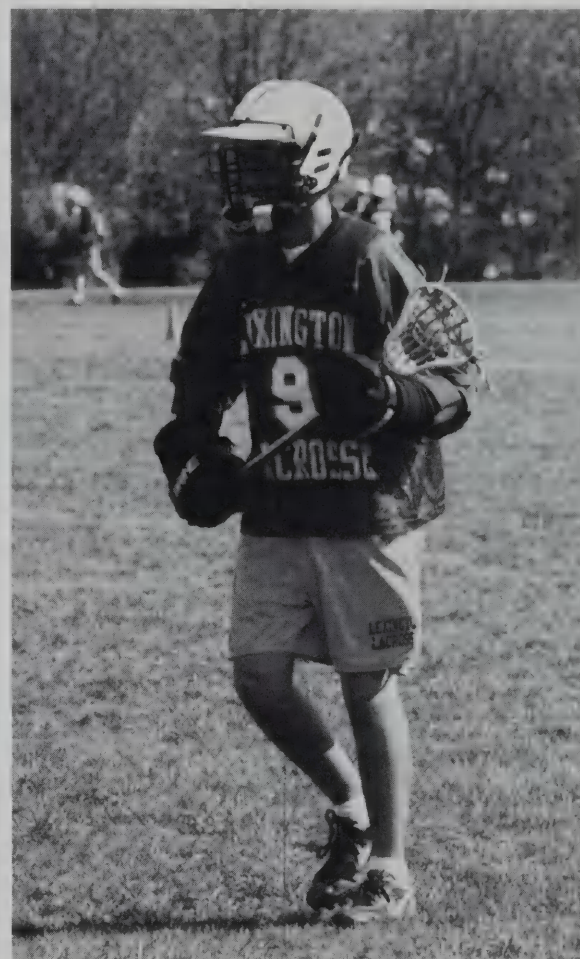

Behind Coach Lautman, the team built off of last year's success and took another step forward this year. The whole team has their eyes on the North League Title.

Endless practices, hour-long bus rides, running in the pouring rain, playing in the bitter cold, fitness path warm-up runs, following Ellen, sprints, SPD's...yes, the Lexington girls' lacrosse team is damn tough. They endure anything and everything, anywhere, anytime, any place.

Keeping up with its long running tradition of success, the lacrosse team finished a victorious season.

This year the team has yielded similar results. At the helm of the defense was goalie Ami "the Wall" Karkar. With Ami in net, Lexington had a tough defense, especially with the tenacious play of returning varsity starters Claire "Yellow Card" Cuno and her persistent defensive ability, Jessica "Tunnel Vision" Liu and her ambidextrous skills, and super-sprinter Sara "the Ballerina" Wiltshire.

The strong attack was led by returning varsity starters' outstanding scorer Sarah "Lefty" Cahill, attack commander Amy "That Tall Girl" Gillis, and step-in Stephany "Surprise Attacker" Collamore. Also helping out the attack this year were Casey Cross, Christie Ludwig, and Liz Palladino.

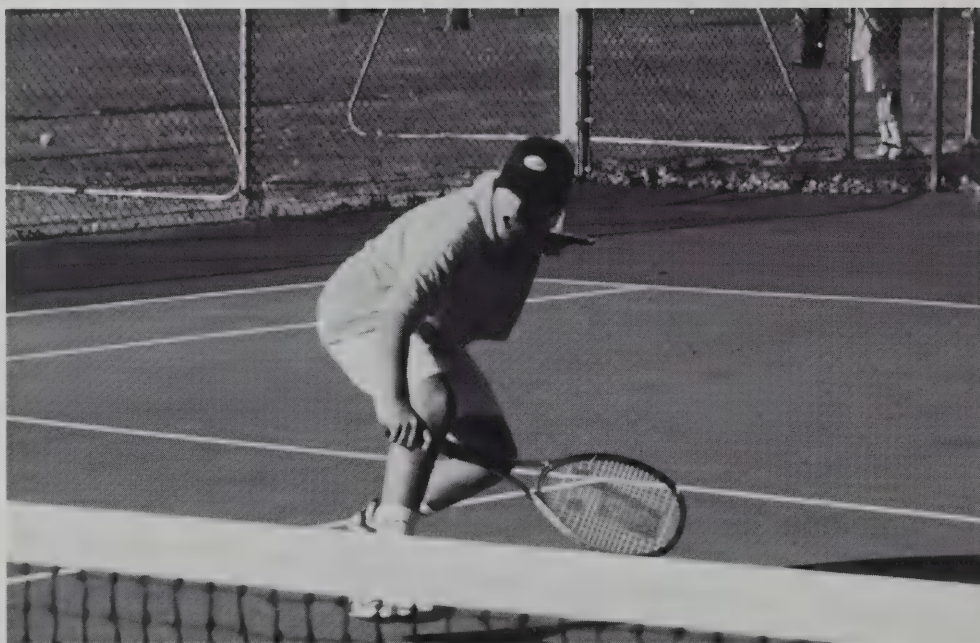

With the help of Lexington's trio of amazing juniors, Miriam "the Streak" Godfrey, Katie "That Little One" Smith, and Kristen "Clutch" Lager, the team was hard to beat. Lexington welcomed back Jill Sweatt and Caitlin Hurley. With hard work, commitment, and enthusiasm, this season was an exciting one!

Amy Gillis crashes past a bunch of hopelessly slow defenders on her way to get another Lexington goal.

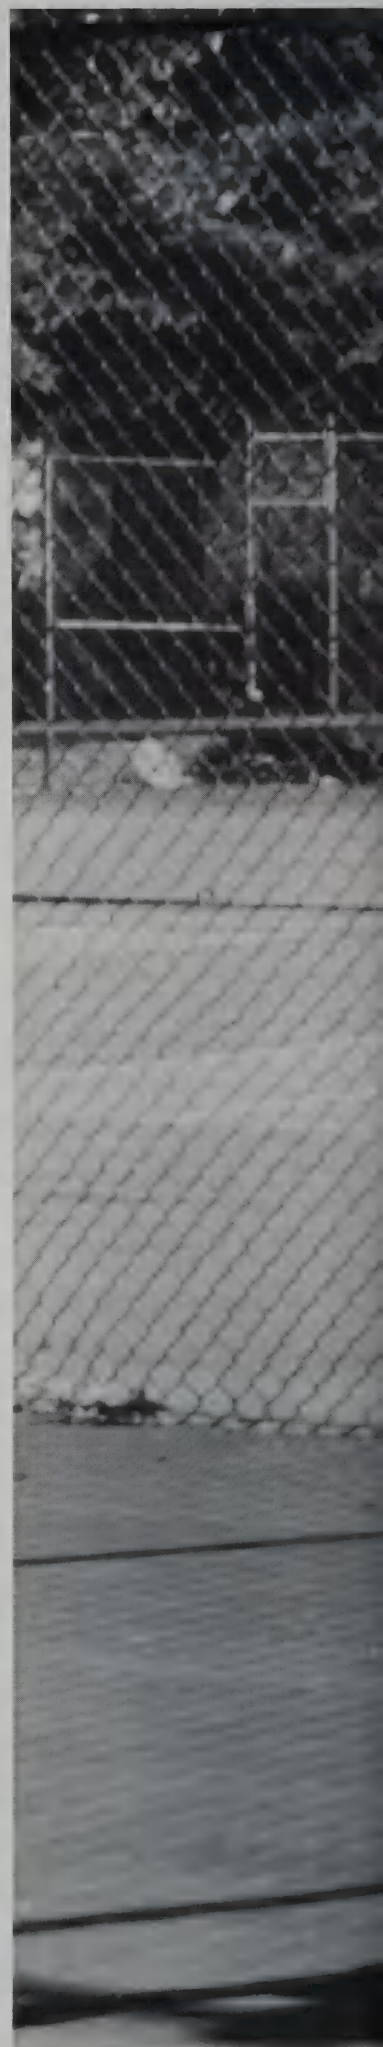

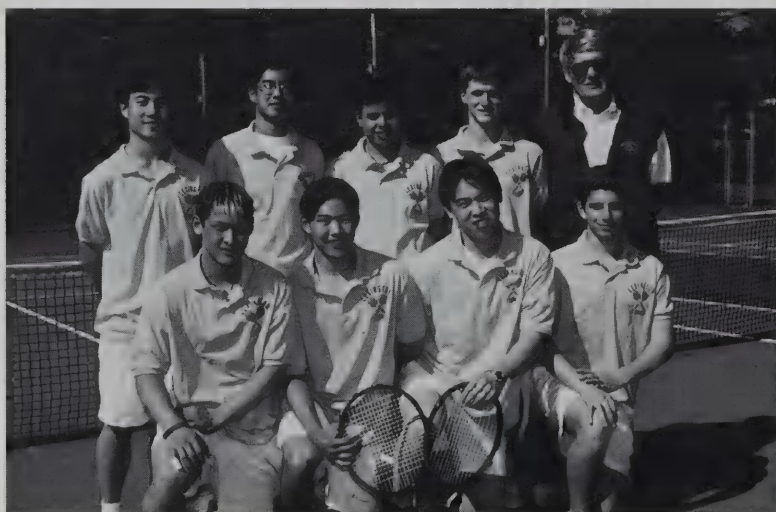

Avital Levy cracks another joke before the next game in order to lighten her teammates up.

Order in the Court

Early in the spring. It's still cold outside... More than 30 kids go out to the tennis court all looking for the 7 spots on the LHS tennis team. They battle for the seven golden varsity jerseys, other wise known as LEGACY. Unlike other sports teams of the high school, the tennis team does not buy any team warm up jerseys, team jackets, or team shirts. Instead, the golden jerseys worn by the seven players during the matches are lent from the coach. The golden jerseys are the legacy because last year's varsity players, the varsity players before them, and all the players who once played for LHS tennis wore that same jersey.

After the tryouts, the winners stay and play for the team. The team is selected to win. "But the tryout was too short...", "Give me another chance...", "It was too windy to play tennis..." BOO-HOO.

The winners don't complain. They simply prove it. The season starts, the best seven go out onto the tennis court, crushing the opponents.

Tennis master Jon Amar crushes a wicked line-drive just over the net that leaves his unfortunate opponent a little embarrassed.

Reaching out to make a powerful follow-through, Wayne Chuang saves a ball that would've been out.

"Ewwwwwww... that's one ugly hit."
-Jasmeen Spidle

With a twist of her waist and a flick of her wrist, Sarah Platt returns the ball back to her opponent.

After suffering from a major eye surgery, Stephanie Coueignoux tries to play blind.

Serving a VICTORY

To those who aren't really aware of the girls' tennis team, these words sadly sometimes conjure up the thought - Girls playing in short skirts? That's not a "real" sport. I pity those unenlightened who hold such deluded misconceptions.

Myth: Tennis is only a senior citizen sport.

Truth: LHS girls' tennis is hardcore all the way.

Yes, we do play in sexy skirts but with Spandex underneath. The truth is we are warriors: ones that just happen to dress a little nicer. The secret to our success lies in the fact that while we might appear harmless, however, once we get you on the court, you'd better run while you still can.

Our friendly faces morph into masks of concentration and determination. Our bodies don't even register the ice cube in the mouth cold or the egg frying on the sidewalk heat. Our serves are the product of pure muscle and skill. We smash our overheads with almost superhuman strength. We slice. We volley. We scramble and dive to reach the ball, sacrificing ourselves to the unforgiving cement ground. We yell at ourselves and cheer each other on. We are the LHS girls' tennis team. Hear us roar.

The Girls' Tennis Power Trio:
Stephanie Coueignoux, Sarah Platt,
and Jasmeen Spidle

A Step AHEAD

Despite the loss of some key performers, this year's edition of men's outdoor track was a darn good one. The team was loaded with excellent runners, jumpers, and throwers. Led by the dynamic duo, Coach Crosby and Coach Berting, the team worked hard with the intention of putting in some great performances come league and state time. The distance team was especially strong, with junior Ian Joseph and seniors Nick Roetter and Mike Mihovan handling the mile. Seniors Misha Horowitz, Max Woolf, and sophomore Alex Popkin were animals in the 2 mile. Senior Eric Walker and Junior Kevin Wolf torched the competition in the 800 meter. Sophomores Tyrone Jack and Shin Horiuchi led the sprinting and jumping crew. Roetter and Joseph showed they had versatility by occasionally dropping down to the mid distances. Mike McCormack was once again the best 400 meter runner in the league. With Ralph Smith and Peter North as inspiration, the team looks ahead with great expectations. The men's outdoor track team knows that with a lot of training and a little Boris, anything is possible.

LHS 1998 Boy's Outdoor Track Team

Paul Bovet flies over the hurdle.

"Weeeeeeee! Mama, watch me fly!!!" -Jeremy Singh

"Oh...I wish I could be as fast as he..." whines Alex Pollen, referring to Ian Joseph who's in front of him.

With his amazing force, Alex Sterzin throws the javelin, attempting to hit his neighbor.

"Die Burlington, DIE!" Says Melissa Sheffield, aiming the javelin at her opponent.

Knowing that she's about to make another personal record, Akua-Nia Gibb tries to do a wave while jumping.

(L to R) Front: Kathy Yang, Katherine Rose, Amie Shei, Grace Licorish, Caitlin Woolf, Kate Waller, Carolyn Shank, Margot Seldin. 2nd Row: Jocelyn Segal, Molly Powers, Melissa Sheffield, Akua-Nia Gibb, Ebony Jack, Eleanor Finnegan, Lakshmi Gowda, Rachael Asquith, Kim Osgerby. 3rd Row: Kate Shugart, Deena Mencow, Joana Gross, Katie Fraiser, Karen Choi, Suzanne Kern, Kathryn Wrigley, Ariel Klemmer, Caroline Lyday, Jamie Miles. 4th Row: Shin Jung Hong, Alki Delichatsios, Trish Sealy, Kate Walker, Laura Griffin, Vanessa Carr, Heather Knight, Erika Almquist, Kelly Makovich, Mel Weisner. Back: Tish Amos, Allegra Atkinson, Kristin Ruffi, Kate Reynolds, Erica Holland, Rachel Adler.

On the Right Track

Fired up by Mr. Totas' inspirational speeches, the girls looked forward to defending their State crown and repeating their undefeated season. We always looked to Ms. Bergin for her advice on how to dress for the weather, since during Outdoor we finally are let out of the dirty, dark field house, which has been our home for the winter months. It's a relief to be out in the sunshine, sharing the track with the fine citizens of Lexington. What other people would need to ask runners dressed in funny little tank tops that say "Lexington" who are carrying hurdles into every lane, whether or not there is a track meet going on this afternoon? We have yet to see a sign on any of the other tracks warning people not to be on the track while a meet is in session.

It's not that we just want the track for ourselves while we are competing, but there are many hidden dangers. Any runner will tell you that it is deadly to try to cross the middle of the track to get to the other side, because there are sharp implements, javelins, coming from one side, and heavy shot puts from the other. Too often a wayward middle schooler needs to be warned as they try to get to the far side of the track as quickly as possible. Also there is the water fountain that will leave you soaking if you try to drink too much water at once.

There are other little perks that make Lexington Girls' Outdoor Track special. The looks that we get at big meets, because we are the only kids sitting in the bleachers playing word games to pass the time on a Saturday; running Hayden hills, and getting not only lollipops but Popsicles after a hard meet. Outdoor track was the perfect way to end the sports year, and made the seniors realize how much they will truly miss Lexington track.

Trying to direct traffic and jump at the same time, Kim Osgerby sets another personal record.

Looking at the opposition with pity, Eleanor Finnegan smiles knowing that they're guaranteed to win.

"You and me have a better time than most can dream, have tears at us, whatever holds us down and if nothing can be done, but who you're with that really matters and hurts not much"

Congratulations on your accomplishments! May you be inspired by the challenges that lie ahead.

Sarah,

For me to express, for me to find the words of what it is I want to say, what you mean to me, is the impossible. We've seen each other through it all, shed our tears, and had our share of highs and lows. You've held me tight when I felt life wasn't worth living, and taught me to always expect so much. You're everything a sister could ask for and an 18 year old could be. I know you're going to go places in life you never have let anyone down. Just do me one favor, and don't let me down - remember... remember the innocence as children, remember the embraces, the laughs, and your little sis. You always have been my best friend. No matter what happens as we get older you always have my love. You can't get rid of me, blood never fades.

Love always and forever.
